ORAH IN A REVOLT

Challenge to Hoover on Tariff Is Issued by the Idaho Senator.

EMANDS HE TELL VIEWS

he President's Attitude on Industrial Schedules Is Asked in Speech on Floor.

SSAILS FLEXIBLE CLAUSE

Sinful Waste of Time and Money" Is His Characterization of Provision.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The "break" tween President Hoover and Sena- r William E. Borah, his leading sup- orter in the last campaign, was idened today when the Idaho sena- r challenged the President from e floor of the senate to state his ews on the industrial schedules in e new tariff bill.

Taking direct issue with the Presi- ent, Borah first condemned the flexi- e tariff provisions as a "sinful waste time and money." Then, while as- rting the right of the President to eak in defense of the flexible tariff, orah demanded that Mr. Hoover milarly speak his views on tariff tes to the country.

Asks Further Statement.

"I ask from the floor of the senate at the President advise the senate d the country," said Borah, "as he d on the flexible tariff provision, hether he approves the industrial hedules of this bill."

By a coincidence, Senator David A. eed of Pennsylvania, Republican, by means a warm friend of the Presi- ent, rushed to Mr. Hoover's defense. eed said the Constitution author- ed the President to recommend gislation and, he added, the method llowed by Mr. Hoover in issuing a atement to the press was just as ef- ctive as sending a formal message congress.

"A Self-Appointed Spokesman."

Reed took sharp issue with Borah er the latter's charge that the tariff as a struggle between agricul- re and industry. Reed termed orah "one of the self-appointed pokesmen for agriculture" and de- ed his right to speak for it. Reed id the issue in the tariff fight was tween one group "attempting to ag industry down to agriculture's vel" and the Republican group eeking to drag agriculture up to in- ustry's level."

An opponent of the flexible princi- le, Borah said that if the chief ex- cutive has established a precedent y issuing his statement on the tar- ff, the action would be condemned by him.

"It is not my idea of the division f the duties of the various branches f government under the Constitu- ion," the senator said.

But, he added, the practice had een going on for about sixty years nd therefore he could not with jus- ification criticize Mr. Hoover.

Worked for Higher Rates.

Instead of being flexible and re- ulting in a reduction of duties, Borah said the provision had been nflexible and had worked princi- ally in the direction of upward evision.

"I take the position that not a ingle reduction of any moment has een made or recommended to the ariff commission under this provi- ion," the Idahoan continued.

"Does the President approve of hem?" he asked.

"Is he satisfied with the agricul- ural duties, and finally is he satisfied that this bill meets the promises f the last campaign?"

Points to President's Power.

"The power to levy taxes was placed on congress in the name of God," Borah said, "and in the name of God let us keep it there."

The President of the United States, he added, enjoyed greater power than any living soul, asserting President Wilson once had told him that he "shuddered when he thought of the power of the President."

Enumerating the various powers of the executive, including his command of the army and navy, practically the power to make war by his conduct of foreign affairs, and the appointive power, Borah said the supreme court now had decided that the President had the dismissing power and added:

"No senator who has served in this body will underestimate that power."

Calls It an Embargo.

While not opposing the protective tariff system, Borah told the senate he felt the protective principle had been so applied to industry as to amount to an embargo.

"I am unwilling to leave the West and the agricultural industry to the tariff commission," he thundered, adding the tariff commission largely has been made up of lobbyists.

Turning to the personnel of the commission, he said the chairman (Thomas Marvin) came from that section where had been held the idea of free trade for agriculture. Another member, he added, had been a lobbyist for one great industry.

"Are we western senators to be asked to surrender our right of debate and vote and have this matter turned over to a commission on which we have no representation at all?" he demanded.

King Interrupts Reed.

When Senator Reed arose to answer a "few points" in Borah's speech, Senator King of Utah, Democrat, interrupted to ask if the President had not ignored his prerogative to send such messages direct to congress instead of giving them to the newspapers.

"His words reached congress and the people, no matter what method was adopted," Reed replied.

A WALL STREET PROTEST.

In a series of editorials The Star has been inviting attention to the dangers in the stock market situation, and especially to the heavy burden excessive speculation is imposing on industry, business and agriculture in the West. The Wall Street Journal, a chief exponent of the Wall street point of view, takes The Star to task for the last of these editorials.

In a first-page editorial it criticizes The Star's position in detail and ends by inquiring whether this newspaper thinks the interests that center in Kansas City would be safer and more profitable "if a devastating and needless smash in the stock market could be brought about."

The Star hopes there will be no smash in the market. But it does believe that the West is carrying a heavy load because of the wild Wall street activities. It does believe that the interests of this territory—as well as those of the whole country—require a drastic deflation of stocks.

It is the interests of the West that The Star is fighting for—the interests of the West of industry, business, agriculture—as opposed to the interests of the professional traders on Wall street.

On the editorial page tomorrow morning The Star will discuss in some detail the criticisms of the Wall Street Journal and will set forth once more its own position on the West and the stock market.

TRAFFIC CIRCLE TOLL GROWS.

Wrecked Car With Four Is Tossed Into Linwood Zone.

The traffic circle at Linwood boulevard and the Paseo, scene of many motor car crashes, suffered another blow last night. Two cars collided and one of them was tossed into the circle.

No one was injured, but the car that was thrown into the circle, a Ford roadster, was wrecked. It was driven by a youth who gave his name as Virgil Bates, 3076 Cissna avenue, Kansas City, Kansas. With him was his sister, Marjorie Bates, and another boy and girl.

The other car was driven by W. J. Bernardine of California. Each driver asserted the other was driving against the signals.

The Rev. Charles R. Tyner, pastor of St. George's Episcopal church, who lives at 3217 the Paseo, helped the boys and girls from the wreckage. Whenever Mr. Tyner hears a crash in his vicinity he immediately goes to the corner to give aid.

EIGHT LOST IN TWO PLANES.

Search Is Begun for Prospectors Missing in Canada Two Weeks.

(By the Associated Press.)

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Search by air started today for eight prospectors, missing two weeks, in two airplanes in the Northwest. Four planes took off from Stoney Rapids in Northwestern Saskatchewan on an 800-mile hop to Beverley Lake, one of the scheduled stopping points on the flight of the missing prospectors.

The two missing planes were said to have carried a supply of food sufficient to last to the end of October, while game is also said to be abundant in the region where the planes were lost.

SUMMER'S SPELL TO LINGER.

Fair Skies Will Hold and Mercury May Go to Upper 80s.

Mostly fair skies and continued mild weather are expected tonight and tomorrow by R. L. Anderson, assistant to P. Connor. The temperature may be in the upper 80s tomorrow.

The warm autumnal weather here is in contrast to rain and coolness in Northern Iowa, in Nebraska and in the Dakotas. Except for an area around Hays, which reported .93 inch of rain, it is dry and warm in Kansas and south and east of here.

A smoke-mist hung over the business section early today, the result of very little air movement.

MRS. HOOVER A SHOPPER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover slipped away from her motor cycle escorts and guards of honor today to go shopping.

What she purchased and how much she bought may never be known.

She came here to aid the Girl Scouts movement in its campaign to raise 3 million dollars for its 5-year development program.

THE COURTS MORE JUST

High Judges in Conference Here Are Warned, However, by Former Bar Head, to Watch the Trend Closely.

Tendency of higher courts of the country to disregard immaterial technicalities in legal procedure, as shown in decisions of the last decade, was lauded today as an advanced step by Lon O. Hocker, St. Louis, president of the St. Louis police board, in an address to supreme court, appellate and circuit judges attending the Missouri judicial conference at the Hotel Muehlebach. Mr. Hocker is a former president of the Missouri Bar Association.

More than fifty judges and commissioners of the higher courts were in attendance, the largest session, it was said, in the history of the conference.

TECHNICALITIES LOSING OUT.

"No longer does the omission of the word 'the' in an indictment or an inartificiality of statement in a pleading cause reversals if the indictment charges the necessary elements of the offense, or the pleading substantially apprises the other party of the claim made," Mr. Hocker told the judges.

"No longer does it profit a defendant's lawyer to sit by like a spider in his web and endeavor to trap his opponent or the court into some purely technical error. No longer does it avail him with microscopic eye to dissect an instruction and find some faulty grammar or trifling verbal inaccuracy, where the instruction in substance states the law of the case as it would be understood by average men."

Mr. Hocker warned the jurists, however, against violation or evasion of established principles or rules of law. Too often, he said, judges warp such rules to fit individual cases, either from sympathy or prejudice, with the result that members of the bar are thrown into confusion and do not know how to advise their clients.

SHOULD BE RULES OF LAW.

"We should not look upon these old principles so reverently as to continue them when changed conditions make them instruments of injustice, but we should be reasonably sure that the changes and modifications which occur to us should not be empirical or applied only to the cases in hand, but should apply to all situations essentially similar, so as to be, indeed, rules of law.

"Our form of government is yet too new and untried by time and adversity for us to look upon it with placid complacency. The last few years have been an open season for governors in the Midwest states. So often is one impeached that we are no longer shocked by it. The attitude of much of the thinking public toward our legislatures has become that of silent contempt or open scorn. The last solid bulwark against the hordes of bolshevism and anarchy is public confidence in the integrity and wisdom of our courts. If the great ship of the law is seen to be blown from its course not only by the storms of social evolution but by every whimsical, vagrant zephyr that fans her sails, public confidence cannot but be weakened, if not lost—'and there an end.'"

GREAT STRIDE IN KANSAS.

Justice Harvey Tells of Accomplishments of Judicial Council.

The Kansas judicial council has not accomplished any changes in the state constitution or the statutes, but it has accomplished many improvements in the judicial system of the state.

So declared W. W. Harvey, associate justice of the Kansas supreme court and chairman of the council, in an address before the Missouri judicial conference at the Hotel Muehlebach this afternoon.

Justice Harvey explained in great detail what the Kansas council had undertaken and the work of gathering judicial data to show the Missouri conference how the Kansas organization had proceeded.

"So far as constitutional or statutory changes are concerned, the council has accomplished nothing," Judge Harvey said. "With respect to the power of the supreme court to make rules of procedure for trial courts, that question has been thoroughly considered. The power of the court to do so, at least to a limited extent, is settled, and rules have actually been made and are in force. Experience alone, of course, will determine their wisdom and in what respect they should be modified. By the compilation of data from the records of the courts it has been demonstrated that there is but little justification or excuse for what may be termed the harebrained, adverse general criticism of courts which has heretofore been indulged in at times by public speakers and which sometimes appeared in the public press.

"Within the last year or so we have heard and seen very little of that. The records disclose that in most of the judicial districts of the state the great mass of the judicial business is transacted with reasonable diligence and dispatch. It is only the occasional case, or the occasional judicial district, where that is not true. In almost every judicial district of the state, if counsel desire to do so and are ready to try their cases, they may be tried at the first term of court after the issues are made up, and sometimes before, and there has been, and is, no criticism of delay in disposing of cases in the supreme court.

"The very fact that the Judicial Council was created and has been collecting data and making inquiries has itself been a great stimulus to courts and court officials with respect to the dispatch of business. There has been a substantial improvement in that regard brought about by the trial courts themselves, and in this they have been aided many times by the lawyers who practice before the courts.

"The records from our courts indicate that criminal cases are tried with reasonable promptness, that

FEAR A TRIPLE VOLCANO

SIMULTANEOUS ERUPTION OF HAWAIIAN CRATERS POSSIBLE.

A Series of Very Violent Shocks Is Taken by Dr. Jaggar to Mean Eruption by One or Three Volcanoes.

(By the Associated Press.)

HILO, ISLAND OF HAWAII, Sept. 26.—Suspense and excitement gripped the populace of Western Hawaii today after residents had been frightened away from their homes by a violent earthquake which was believed to be the forerunner of eruptions from the three big volcanoes nearby.

The most violent quake of a series of about 150 temblors that had kept the western half of the island aquiver for more than twenty-four hours came shortly after 6 o'clock last night. Walls and buildings in various parts of the quaking area fell and residents rushed from their homes. So violent was the quake that the seismograph at Kealakekua was ruined. It was the most severe shaking the island has received within the memory of its oldest residents.

AN ERUPTION IS INDICATED.

Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, government volcanologist, a few hours before the violent shock was felt, asserted the frequent quakes portended an eruption of one or more of the three large volcanoes on the western half of Hawaii. He believed all three, Kilauea, Mauna Loa and Hulalai, might erupt simultaneously.

The three volcanoes stand in an almost straight line running across the island from southeast to northwest. At one end stands Hulalai, with Kilauea at the other. Between them is Mauna Loa.

LAVA FROM THREE CRATERS.

Kona, the district in which Hulalai is located, appeared to have been shaken more frequently than any other. Jaggar, who has studied Hawaii's volcanoes for many years, said an eruption, possibly on the west flank of Hulalai, might be expected within a month, but that the lava might reach the surface from Mauna Loa or Kilauea. He asserted it was possible that lava would pour from all three craters.

"Earthquakes in the Kona district are more like vibrations ending in sudden jolts," said Dr. Jaggar. "These cause houses to shake freely. This possibly is the result of lava forcing its way up a huge crevice. It is altogether possible the tremors may cease in time, the subsequent eruption coming in five years. However, this is not probable."

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—Physicians disclosed here today that Joseph Mayott, 54, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, living at the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle, was afflicted with a rare malady which causes him to grow shorter in stature.

"Doctors say I may live fifty years longer," Mayott said, "but if I do I'll be able to hide behind a shoebox. I was 5 feet 7 inches tall eight years ago, but now I'm 4 feet 10."

The disease, for which no cure is known, has been called Paget's disease. It is a strange ailment which gradually reduces the size of the bones. Mayott is in no pain and is in no particular danger of an untimely death.

1 1-2 MILLION DOLLAR POLICY

Bus Company Insures the Lives and Health of 800 Employees.

What is said to be the second largest life insurance policy ever written in Kansas City has been signed by Howard H. Morgan, vice-president and general manager of the Pickwick-Greyhound Lines, Inc., O. F. Teichgraeber, manager of the group division Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, announced today. The policy calls for a total of 1½ million dollars on the lives of the 800 employees of the bus system.

A similar amount is provided for in event of accidental death or dismemberment, while the weekly sick or accident benefits total about $20,000, all covered in one policy. Mr. Morgan said the company would carry about one-third of the cost of the insurance, while the employees would be required to pay two-thirds.

A larger policy was written, also by the Metropolitan, with R. A. Long for all of the employees of the Long-Bell Lumber Company. That policy was for 5 million dollars.

LONDON BANK RATE UP.

Drain of Gold to the Continent and America Forces Action.

(By the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Directors of the Bank of England today raised the discount rate of 6½ per cent, from the 5½ per cent rate prevailing since last February.

The step was taken to protect the bank's gold stock, due to the continued outflow of gold to the continent and the United States, which this week totaled more than 15 million dollars, and which since the beginning of the year exceeds 100 million dollars.

Business experts say today's rise will be a handicap to trade and industry, but the authorities think it is necessary to attract to London some of the gold which has been drifting away.

The effect of the higher bank rate was reflected immediately in foreign exchanges, where rates moved sharply in favor of London.

On the stock exchange the movement had been largely discounted, since the continuous gold withdrawals and gilt-edged stocks eased only a fraction from yesterday's level.

TO CONSERVE POLICE ENERGY.

Commissioner Field Believes the Band Plays Too Often.

Russell Field, police commissioner, said today he intended to instruct John L. Miles, chief of police, to curtail the activities of the 40-piece police band. He said too many calls had been received asking for services of the band.

For several weeks the police bandmen have been giving free concerts at various churches here and in Independence. Commissioner Field believes the members of the band should not be imposed upon to play so often. Wallace Cameron, secretary to Chief Miles, said twenty members of the band were members of the department, while the other twenty were volunteer musicians. Street car passes are given the outside musicians for their free services to the band, he said.

A PLAYTOWN THIS FALL

KANSAS CITY HAS A GAY CALENDAR FOR THE SOUTHWEST.

Entertainments Will Follow Closely on Each Other's Heels, Starting Next Week—A Surprise in November.

The barrier of fall and winter gayety will be let down with the advent of October, and Kansas City will spread before the Southwest an array of fascinating attractions with an appeal wide enough to center attention on the city as the playtown of the West.

Spectacles of magnitude dot the weeks from now until December 1, when the countryside will abandon its search for personal pleasures to provide the Christmas touch for relatives and friends.

SHUBERT OPEN MONDAY.

The Shubert theater will usher in the season with its opening next Monday night with "The Red Robe." The Oberfelder-Ketcham Stock Company will open the Orpheum theater October 12 for a 30-week run of stock. The Orpheum will follow the guest star policy, which proved popular last year.

Baseball fans of the territory will flock to Kansas City for the little world's series, which will open at Muehlebach Field next Wednesday for games scheduled that day, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

Then The Star will have a party, afternoon and night, at Convention Hall, October 8. The U. S. Marine band will give three concerts that day, and the city and the countryside will be The Star's guests for a treat of rousing band music.

A FIREWORKS SPECTACLE.

A fireworks spectacle on a grand scale will be staged at Muehlebach Field, beginning October 9, when "The Last Days of Pompeii" will be depicted in fireworks. The sponsor of the event is Ararat Temple of the Shrine. It will be a nightly exhibition until October 19.

A serious note to the gatherings of the month will be the annual assembly here of the Southwest Clinical Conference, to be at the Hotel President from October 7 to 11, and which will attract 450 physicians from the Southwest.

Kansas City still will be a mecca for visitors in November. The American Royal Livestock Show, the greatest show of its kind, will open for a week at the American Royal building. Combined with it will be the Horse Show, which is to be aided this year by the Junior League and made a social event of interest.

THE STAR HAS A SURPRISE.

And then another event is being planned for November. It is a surprise Christmas entertainment which The Star has in preparation for the people of Kansas City and the visitors who will come to Kansas City for it. As yet the nature of the event is a guarded secret, but details of it will be intriguing when definite announcement is made.

There is still another reason why Kansas City will be host to unnumbered visitors next month. That is the array of fall and winter finery for women which is being shown at Kansas City stores. October will bring a busy shopping season in preparation for the parties and amusements here and in the home towns of the city's shopping visitors.

EDITH TALIAFERRO FIRST.

Guest Star for Orpheum Opening Is Announced.

Edith Taliaferro will be the first guest star of the Oberfelder-Ketcham Players at the Orpheum theater, opening Saturday night, October 12, and her first play probably will be Sir James M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," in which Helen Hayes starred in New York.

Miss Taliaferro has a well-earned reputation on the legitimate stage and has appeared most successfully as guest star in other cities. Other plays that she has used as starring attractions include "Pygmalion," "The Garden of Eden," "Her Cardboard Lover" and "The Dove."

THE RACERS A DAY LATE

ARRIVAL AT FAIRFAX WILL BE TOMORROW AFTERNOON.

No Reason for the Change Is Given in City of Mexico-Kansas City Derby—In Springfield Tonight.

The four Mexican army pilots and the two Americans in the City of Mexico-Kansas City air derby will not land at Fairfax airport until between 3 and 4 o'clock tomorrow, according to an announcement this afternoon from headquarters of the International Air Circus and Pilots' Reunion.

The announcement is contrary to previous plans for the arrival of the racers, who were to land today. No explanation was forthcoming for the change other than that last minute changes had been made.

Three of the Mexican fliers and Col. Arthur C. Goebel, the leader, and Rex Purcell, the only other American in the race, took off from Wewoka, Ok., last night's control point, early today and landed at Muskogee forty-five minutes later. A brief delay resulted there, caused by a cracked strut on Colonel Goebel's plane.

Lieut. Carlos Rivirosa, who spent last night in San Antonio after he overshot the field and landed seventy miles away, was speeding northward today to catch up with Capt. Feliciano Flores, Col. Roberto Fierro and Capt. Luis Verdeja and the two Americans.

Tonight's control stop will be Springfield, Mo.

TWO PILOTS "CLEAN UP."

Roberts and Quimby Figure in Much of the Prize Money.

After the dust of the International Air Circus and Pilots' Reunion, now going on at Fairfax Airport, has cleared away, it is doubtful if any pair of pilots will have taken more prize money away with them than the two Monocoupe pilots here throughout the show.

They are Vern Roberts and his flying mate, Stub Quimby, who probably have furnished as many thrills for the spectators in the racing events as any two fliers attending the circus.

Upon each occasion either of the two has been asked to get into the air and stunt as a flier between programmed events, both have been ready to go. Their two planes, one a black Monocoupe, the other red and yellow, have been prominent in every event of note since the circus opened Saturday.

Roberts and Quimby, however, are not alone here in their representations of the company which manufactures the tiny planes they fly. Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, a participant in the women's air derby from Santa Monica to Cleveland, also is here and probably will participate in the women's races today.

Barton Stevenson, a Kansas City pilot now connected with the Moline, Ill., factory of the Mono Aircraft Corporation, is another Monocoupe flier who has returned to Kansas City for the circus. The latter also has played a prominent part in the stunting exhibitions throughout the show.

All in all, these tiny aircraft, so extremely maneuverable and so fast, have done much to create and hold interest in the remarkable flying exhibitions which have been seen at Fairfax Airport.

Yesterday's crowd at the airport was the largest since Sunday. Yesterday's receipts amounted to about $2,300.

The dirigible Vigilant packed up its mooring mast and nosed eastward early today. Its destination was St. Louis, where its pilot, V. L. Smith, was scheduled to attend the start of the international balloon races. The latter are races for free balloons only, so Smith and his Vigilant will attend merely to lend additional interest.

TRAFFIC STOPPED AGAIN

STATE READY FOR WORST

The Lower Peninsula Had Prepared to Battle the Storm if It Should Strike.

Bulletin.

MIAMI, Sept. 26.—Increasing cloudiness and a rising wind late today gave rise to fears that the tropical hurricane, which it was believed had passed out to sea, might yet change its course and sweep over the coast.

Storm warnings were sent all Cuban ports this noon and shipping, which resumed movement this morning after a 12-hour tie-up, was again halted for the time being. Storm signals again flew from the harbor entrance and warning signals radioed all parts of the island.

Dr. Carlos Millas of the Cuban national observatory told the Associated Press that there was no necessity for present fear in Cuba, but that there was no certainty as to what direction the cyclone would follow. He said that the storm at present was approaching nearer to Cuba and now offers extreme danger for the Florida Keys, but none for Miami.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Western Union announced at 2:30 p. m. today that communication with the Bahamas had been cut off due to the hurricane.

Western Union lines of communication with the Bahamas include land wires to Key West and Tropical Radio from there. It was the latter service which was disrupted.

(By the Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Sept. 26.—Father Gutierrez Lanza of the Belen Jesuit college observatory asserted today the storm danger was over along the east coast of Florida, which had made great preparations against a tropical disturbance centering yesterday in the Bahamas.

Father Lanza told the Associated Press today all traffic, both air and maritime, between Cuba and Florida could be resumed without danger.

Pressed Out to Sea.

According to Father Lanza, the Bahaman storm was unable to blow through a high pressure area which spread over the Atlantic seaboard from the northwestern states yesterday and last night.

This high pressure area forced the storm from its westerly course out to the northeast, sending it away from the Florida coast. A fast rising barometer since 7 a. m. at the Belen observatory and at the National observatory indicated that the strength of the storm in the south was spent.

North-northwest winds were blowing in Havana this morning at a rate of fourteen miles per hour. The sky was clear and forecasts were for moderate winds and possible light showers.

Shipping Activity Resumed.

Shipping activity, which ceased yesterday, was resumed today in Havana harbor, although there were fewer fishing boats than usual to leave at dawn.

The only indication in Havana today that a storm of hurricane intensity had passed within a hundred miles was the spray that swept over the Malecon, or sea wall drive, from unusually large waves.

Ten airplanes of the Pan-American Airways Flying Field at Miami, which had been brought here yesterday afternoon as a precaution, were made ready this morning for the return flight to Miami. Regular flights also will be resumed.

FLORIDA READY FOR WORST

Every Preparation Has Been Made for the Hurricane.

MIAMI, Sept. 26.—With fear abated by the knowledge that all in human power had been done to avert catastrophe, Florida today remained calm.

The meteorologist's statement came after a night of waiting along the coast from Jupiter light on the north to Miami on the south. Indications early last night were that the hurricane would strike slightly north of this city around midnight. Then barometers began to stand still, indicating the progress of the disturbance had been halted.

Never has any community prepared itself so quickly and effectively to meet a seemingly inevitable catastrophe. Since news came that the hurricane was advancing, Southeastern Florida has had only one thought—to prepare for the worst.

Thus dawn found thousands of American Legionnaires, Boy Scouts and private individuals massed throughout the state under disciplinary command, standing by ready to give relief when the first whistling wind tells of the storm's arrival.

It found scores of doctors and nurses concentrated at strategic spots equipped with medicinal supplies, bandages and all the appurtenances needed to render immediate aid.

Transportation facilities were organized to a degree of war-like efficiency.

Southern Florida was a community without windows — virtually every pane of glass being boarded and shuttered.

The waterways were swept clean of boats of all descriptions, the air was free from commercial airplanes, and the homes were filled with persons fully apprised in advance of steps to be taken to prevent loss of life.

Palatial mansions of Palm Beach and West Palm Beach were protected like medieval citadels from the fury of the hurricane. Even costly shrubbery and foliage in gardens were protected from the expected blasts by shrouds of canvas.

Public utility employees were standing by ready to effect immediate repairs to telephone, telegraph and power lines.

Huge tanks were filled with reserve supplies of water in the event the hurricane cut short the drinking supply.

The strongest, newest buildings in each locality had been officially designated by the authorities as places of refuge for persons living in houses that might not be able to withstand the force of the storm.

A CREW INTO LIFEBOATS.

The British Freighter Domira Is Abandoned, Message Says.

(By the Associated Press.)

MIAMI, FLA., Sept. 26.—A message from the British freighter Domira, aground at Abago Island, Bahamas, to Tropical Radio at 10 a. m. today said the crew was abandoning the ship in its lifeboats, but that the captain, radio operator and one other were staying aboard.

This message and another sent at 7:53 a. m. indicated that the vessel had weathered the heavy winds and seas that besieged it yesterday as it lay grounded 100 feet off Man-of-War Key, near Eastern Abaco.

Decision for the crew to abandon the ship apparently was made since the earlier message and in the face of quieting seas and an abatement of the buffeting winds that swept the vessel yesterday.

The lighthouse tender Firebird of the Bahamas' government, which lay harborlocked by the storm yesterday at Nassau, might be proceeding to Abaco this morning, Tropical Radio officials believed, although the break in radio communication with Nassau made it impossible to confirm this.

OUT OF THE EVERGLADES.

Women and Children Flee in Face of Storm Threat.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., Sept. 26.—Fleeing before the tropical storm advancing from the Atlantic, virtually all women and children had evacuated from the Everglades section, according to reports here today.

Arcadia, Sebring and West Palm Beach are housing scores of Everglades farmers and their families. With a few exceptions, only enough men workers are remaining in the Lake Okeechobee section to care for extreme trouble.

Stronger buildings, emergency dikes and a water level in the lake four feet lower than that of last year strengthen the general belief that serious damage along the southeastern shore of Lake Okeechobee is almost impossible.

Due to the heavy death toll of last September's storm, comparatively few workers have yet swarmed into the back country of Palm Beach County seeking employment, and the district is now rather sparsely settled.

Hundreds of cars loaded with South Florida citizens still are heading northward. Railroad offices report heavy northward travel in the last twenty-four hours.

MASONS ELECT S. R. FREET.

Two Other Kansas Citians Have State Posts—Here Next Year.

Kansas City will be host next September to the Masons of Missouri at the annual meeting, members of the lodge reported today on their return from St. Louis and this year's convention. Three Kansas Citians were elected to state offices.

Samuel R. Freet, past master of the Ivanhoe lodge in Kansas City, was elected Missouri grand master. Other officers are William R. Gentry, St. Louis, deputy grand master; Ray V. Denslow, Trenton, grand senior warden; Judge Thad B. Landon, Kansas City, grand junior warden; E. E. Morris, Kansas City, grand treasurer; Arthur Mather, St. Louis, grand secretary.

SKETCHED TODAY AT THE JUDICIAL CONVENTION.

A TRAFFIC REFORM STEP

EXPERT TO MAKE SPECIAL REPORT FOR NEW SIGNAL LIGHTS.

Check Will Assure Maximum Synchronization in Operation of Downtown System to Fit in With Complete Program.

The traffic survey, as far as it has progressed, will be utilized to determine the time-spacing of the new traffic signal lights in the downtown district.

Dr. Miller McClintock, in charge of Kansas City's traffic survey, spoke today before the city-wide traffic committee of the Chamber of Commerce and asked permission to make a special report soon to Matthew S. Murray, director of public works. The committee unanimously granted the authority.

FINAL REPORT IS DISTANT.

The traffic survey is far from completed. Dr. McClintock made no effort to report on results. To date the time has been spent on the details of checking traffic and studying conditions. A final report has not even begun to take form. It will be spring before Dr. McClintock's report and recommendations are given to the city.

But the city is installing traffic lights at all of the principal downtown corners. They must be synchronized so as to aid, rather than delay, traffic. It is to make that possible that Dr. McClintock will make a special report.

A CHECK IN NOVEMBER.

In November a 1-day traffic check will be made and will be expected to give a fairly accurate picture of conditions in the central business district.

More than 150 persons will make a "cordon" check, which will account for every vehicle that enters the district, will check the pedestrians, the storegoers, the persons entering office buildings and those using elevators.

Dr. McClintock said parking facilities in the downtown district, and in some outlying districts, were being given careful study. His checkers have found 189 separate places for parking in and adjacent to the business district. Curb parking also is being studied, as is the question of routing motor cars on both sides of street car safety zones.

AN ANALYSIS IN WINTER.

Checkers have made figures and study is being made of 300 street intersections. They have completed 170 of them on the half-hour traffic check. Sixty of them will be given a full 16½-hour check.

Dr. McClintock said he hoped to have all the outside checking done before cold weather sets in. Then the winter months will be given to an analysis of the checks and he will begin on his report and recommendations.

He met with the traffic committee at the Kansas City Athletic Club.

A BIG GERMAN BANK MERGER.

The New Institution Will Have Capital of 70 Million.

(By the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The greatest bank combine in the German financial world was announced today with the merging of the Deutsche Bank and the Disconto Gesellschaft, with a combined capital of 285 million marks (about 70 million dollars).

News of the bank combine caused a sensation on the Bourse and in business circles, where it came as a complete surprise. Discounts stock jumped 9½ points to 162½, while the Deutsche Bank stock went up 3 points to 164.

It is reported that the National City Bank of New York will take 25 per cent of a new issue of 100 million marks capital.

The Deutsche Bank controls 218 domestic branches and nine foreign branches, and employs 13,000 persons. The Disconto Gesellschaft has 130 branches and 7,000 employees.

DELAY JUNE CAREY HEARING.

there is a large per cent of pleas of guilty, and that our juries, as a rule, convict when the evidence justifies it.

"Our statutes authorize district courts to grant paroles after a verdict or plea of guilty in criminal cases in all cases except for a few offenses. The records would indicate that some judges are much more liberal in granting paroles than others. Our general information is that in some judicial districts much more attention is paid to persons while on parole than in other districts. Among complaints made to us was the manner in which this parole system is handled in some counties.

"An inquiry into the advisability of continuing our present 'indeterminate sentence' law is a matter that would be worth while. The question has arisen as to whether judgments of trial courts are sometimes predicated upon false testimony. We would like to formulate an intelligent way to make an inquiry upon that question, and conduct such inquiry with a view of seeing to what extent that condition exists, who is responsible for it, and suggest methods of eliminating, or at least reducing, it to a minimum. For certainly in this enlightened age no state or nation should provide courts of justice in which perjury can prevail over fair, honest testimony. Other things might be suggested in addition to matters which have already received our attention and which are far from completed."

THE ATTENDANCE IS LARGE.

Few of the State's Jurists Are Missing From the Rolls.

All members of the state supreme court except Judge Robert F. Walker are attending the conference. The supreme court members here are Judge John T. White, chief justice, Judge William T. Ragland, Judge Ernest S. Gantt, Judge Frank E. Atwood, Judge W. F. Frank, and Judge David E. Blair.

Five of the six commissioners of the state's highest tribunal likewise are attending. They are George Robb Ellison, A. M. Seddon, Walter N. Davis, James D. Lindsey, J. A. Cooley.

Circuit judges from out-state who had registered early this afternoon:

Judge Paul Higbee, Kirksville, first circuit.

Judge H. J. Westhues, Jefferson City, fourteenth circuit.

Judge A. G. Knight, Trenton, third circuit.

Judge Ralph Hughes, Liberty, seventh circuit.

Judge Ira D. Beals, Kingston, thirty-sixth circuit.

Judge Dimmitt Hoffman, Sedalia, thirtieth circuit.

Virtually all the circuit judges of Jackson County are attending the meeting and are hosts to their brothers of the bench from outstate.

The visitors were luncheon guests of the Kansas City Bar Association at the Hotel Muehlebach. The conference will conclude with a motor tour of the city, ending at the Kansas City Country Club, where the judges will have dinner.

Today's conference of the judiciary is preliminary to the 2-day session of the Missouri State Bar Association, which will open here tomorrow.

NO AID FROM LEGISLATURE.

Deaf Ear to Recommendations Discourage Judge White.

Criticism of the Missouri legislature's refusal to heed the recommendations of the courts was voiced by Judge J. T. White, chief justice of the Missouri supreme court, in a talk before the judicial conference.

Judge White expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the views of Judge William T. Ragland, who suggested to the conference that it recommend to the legislature some plan of simple business administration for the Missouri courts, providing a more equal distribution of labor in the courts, but declared that he doubted if the Missouri legislature would heed the recommendations.

"Although the statute expressly requires the members of the supreme court to make recommendations to the legislature as to the elimination of defects we discover in the law," Judge White said, "if it ever has adopted or even acted upon a single one of these recommendations it is beyond my knowledge.

"Our great difficulty is not in finding defects and recommending their correction, but in getting the legislature to act. Its members seem to think that the courts are attempting to invade their private preserves; that we should like to interfere with their duties. That is not the case; the courts, naturally, have the opportunity to learn about the law's defects and imperfections. It would seem but reasonable that the legislature should at least give consideration to the recommendations resultant from such observations."

BLAIR TO BE A CANDIDATE.

Supreme Court Judge Has a Clear Field in His Party.

Judge David E. Blair of the Missouri supreme court, Republican, will be a candidate to succeed himself next year, it was stated today by an authoritative source.

Judge Blair is here attending the Missouri judicial conference. It appears almost certain that Judge Blair will not encounter opposition from the ranks of his own party for renomination. Judge Blair's home is at Joplin. He is concluding his first term on the bench, having been elected in 1920.

Possible Democratic opponents of Judge Blair are attending the conference. Among them are George Robb Ellison, commissioner of the supreme court, and Judge Clarence A. Burney of the Jackson County circuit court. R. F. Ward of Caruthersville, president of the Missouri State Bar Association, and Judge Charles L. Henson of Mt. Vernon, also are mentioned as likely Democratic candidates.

SHIP LOBBY IS DENIED

FUND OF $143,000 EXPENDED FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

SHEARER A "REAL INFLUENCE" AT GENEVA CONFERENCE.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Drew Pearson, a newspaper correspondent at the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference, told a senate investigating committee today that William B. Shearer, $25,000 "observer and reporter" of American shipbuilders at that parley, "appeared to be a real influence against Anglo-American good will and was with the naval experts on many occasions."

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The $143,000 fund expended by American shipbuilders in the congressional consideration of the Jones-White merchant marine legislation was not used for lobbying," Lawrence R. Wilder, shipping executive, testified today before senate naval subcommittee.

Wilder, formerly president of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation, took the witness chair as the subcommittee resumed its inquiry into the activities of American shipbuilders and their observer and reporter, William B. Shearer, at the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference.

HELD TWO CRUISER CONTRACTS.

The witness began by relating his company undertook two American cruiser contracts just before the Geneva conference began. A subsidiary of his corporation, the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, shared one-third of the $25,000 paid Shearer to go to Geneva.

Wilder said his corporation obtained a contract to build the cruiser Salt Lake City in April, 1927, while another cruiser contract was received in June, 1927. At this time the corporation also was building the airplane carrier Saratoga. Shearer was sent to Geneva in March, 1927.

In June, 1927, Wilder said, he resigned as president, but served in an advisory capacity to the board until this year.

SHEARER "ARTIST AND CONSULTANT."

Going over the expenditures, he said $4,550 had been given Shearer, who, he added, was listed as an "artist and consultant" in this expense account.

The Ivy Lee Publicity Service, he continued, received $19,340, while $24,000 was spent in developing and designing a dirigible.

Reiterating "not one cent was spent for lobbying," he asserted: "We employed no lobbyists."

"How did you come to hire Shearer?" asked Chairman Shortridge.

"He painted some pictures for us. He wasn't a lobbyist."

Wilder said he took full responsibility for the expenditure of the $143,000 fund.

Wilder said he had been in Washington about six months at the time the unsuccessful 4-day project was being advanced, and that a $24,000 hotel expense item covered the expenses of "ten to twenty people" engaged in technical and economical work. "That item includes their meals and hotel rooms," he said.

In addition to painting, Wilder testified Shearer "was most helpful," and he advised with him "constantly."

About that time the senate asked the shipping board for a report on the 4-day project, and the board returned an unfavorable report, but Wilder said he still hoped to carry out the plan.

THE JONES-WHITE BILL SUITS.

Wilder testified his personal expenditures were $46,622.06. The witness said he discussed the question of "broadening legislation" with Chairman Jones of the senate commerce committee and Chairman White of the house merchant marine committee, authors of the 1928 shipping act, as well as other committee members.

"The Jones-White bill was finally passed, and it was exactly what we hoped for," he added.

Wilder said he first met Shearer in Washington in January, 1928.

"Did you understand what Shearer was supposed to have done at Geneva?" pursued Robinson.

"I think I first heard the word 'observer' used in that connection," replied Wilder. "I don't know what they wanted or expected. The idea of one man breaking up an international conference!"

When he employed Shearer in 1928, Wilder added, he didn't know he had been the Geneva agent of the shipbuilders.

HIS VACATION TRIP BY AIR.

P. R. Goss Plans to Spend Much Time in a Plane.

"I have only eight days of vacation and I'm going to spend as much of it in the air as possible," P. R. Goss, 61 years old, night watchman and janitor for the Dascomb-Daniels Lumber Company, 5201 East Ninth street, said as he boarded a United States Airways plane for Denver at 9 o'clock today.

"No, I'm not going to Denver to visit anyone—just going for the ride in the ship," Mr. Goss said as he climbed into the cabin.

Mr. Goss has been employed by the Dascomb-Daniels Lumber Company for five years. He is a widower and lives in a small apartment in the rear of the yard at 5201 East Eighth street. He saves his money for the sole purpose of making trips by air, he said.

Last year Mr. Goss made two trips by air to St. Joseph, Mo. The trips to St. Joseph were his first experience in the air.

Mr. Goss says he probably will return to Kansas City tomorrow. He will celebrate his sixty-first birthday anniversary October 1.

HIGH HONOR TO MRS. ROGERS.

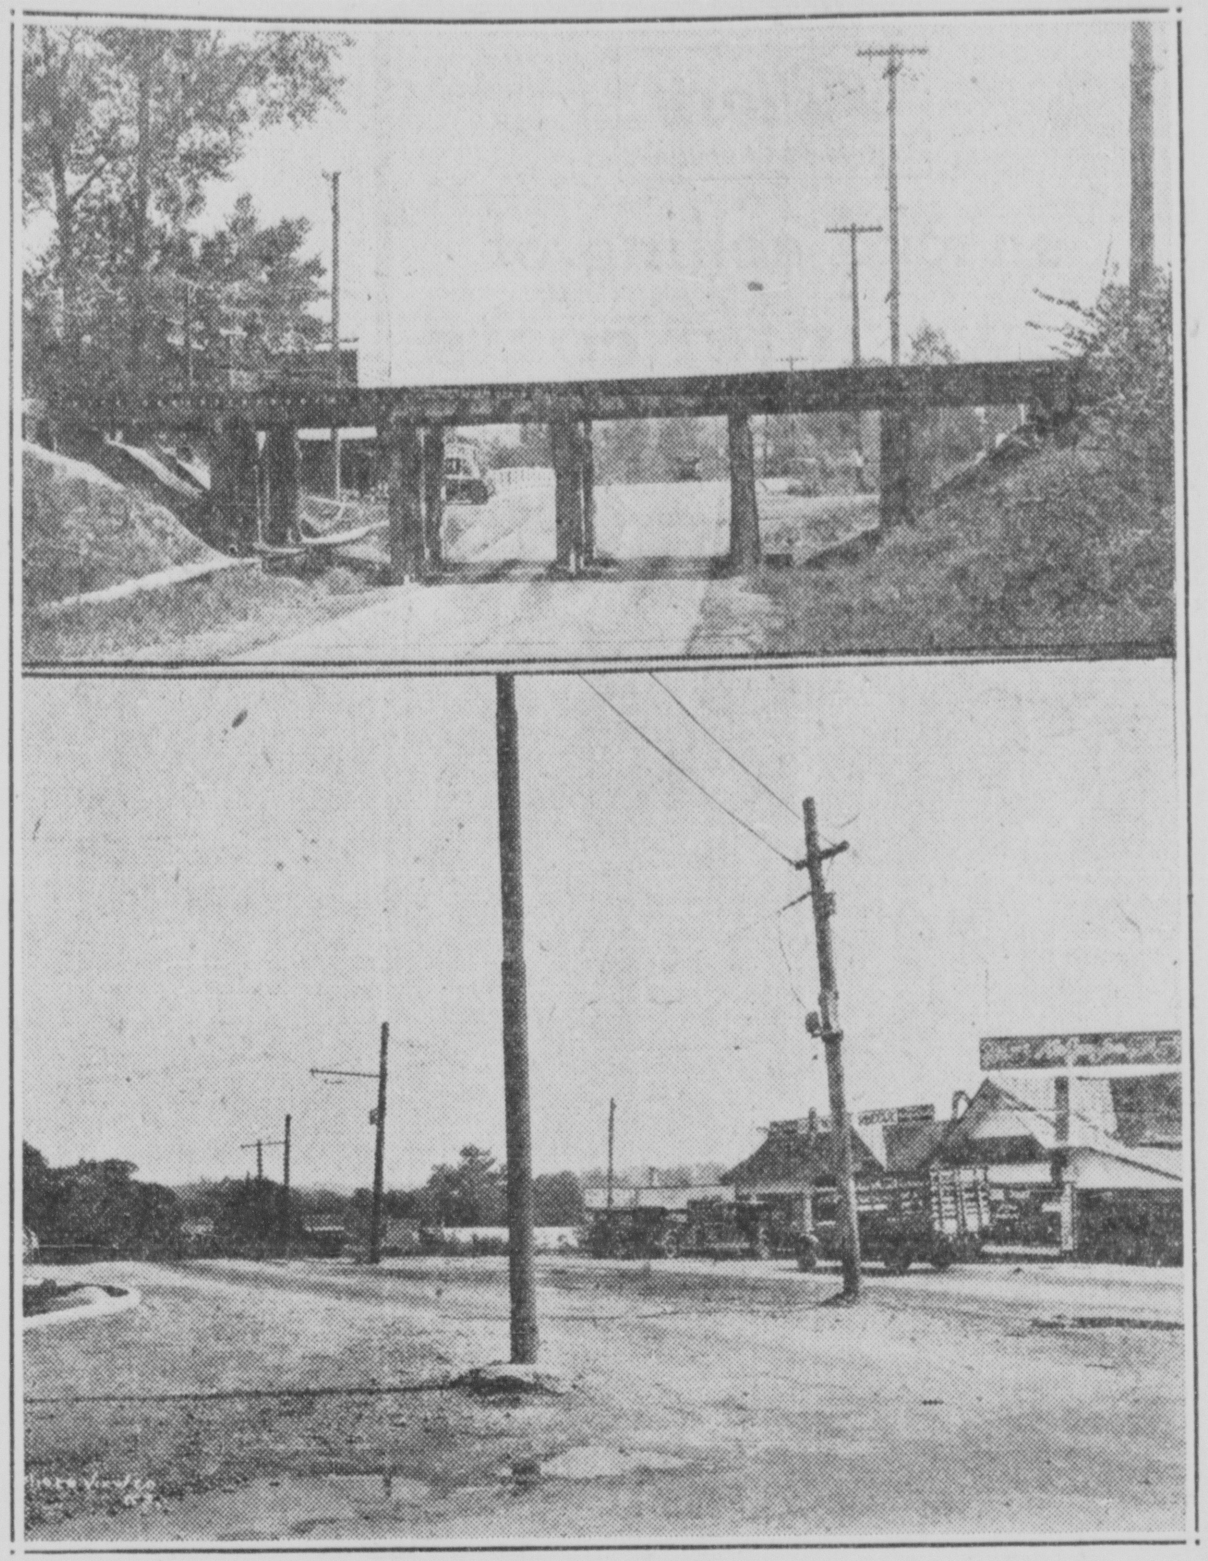
Woman Representative Is Named Speaker Pro Tem. of House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican congresswoman from Massachusetts, today became the first appointed woman speaker pro tem. of the house of representatives.

She presided at a brief session today on written authority of Speaker Longworth.

House Republican leaders announced they would continue until October 28, instead of October 14, the present plan of a 3-day recess during senate consideration of the tariff.

TWO OF MANY THINGS THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION FINDS WRONG WITH ENTRANCE OF NO. 50 HIGHWAY TO KANSAS CITY.



Before Fiftieth street will be viewed by the state highway commission as a standard section of U. S. highway No. 50, several things must be done.

At the top is shown the Frisco underpass just west of the Blue River. It is narrow; is too low to meet state standards, and the clump of piling in the center of the driveway constitutes a menace to traffic, the engineers for the commission say.

Another traffic menace is shown in the lower photograph—the poles standing out in the intersection of Fiftieth street—highway No. 50—and Swope parkway. They are there to serve the "Toonerville trolley" with a power line. They stand in the midst of the section set aside for traffic and are unlighted. The highway commission recommends, and is urging, the removal of the car line from the center of Fiftieth street, and the poles would go with it. There now is an ordinance in the city council providing for the elimination of the car line. It is not a part of the street car system, and has only a summer and a winter car, on which the fare is 5 cents for the round trip. The state has laid a slab nine feet wide on each side of the tracks, and would pave the center if the tracks were removed.

HALTS FILLING STATION

A NEW MOVE IN LINWOOD BOULEVARD AND TROOST PROJECT.

Building Permit Is Withdrawn and a Permit to Cut Into Curbing Is Denied, Delaying the Work Temporarily at Least.

The building permit, issued on instructions of the city manager when his efforts to halt the station failed, was withdrawn by the superintendent of buildings today on the advice of the city counselor's department.

The park board, on advice of its counsel, refused to grant the Firestone company a permit to cut the curbs for driveways, holding that the cancellation of the building permit nullified the company's application.

The next move will be by the Firestone company's attorneys and was expected to be in the form of mandamus proceedings against the city calling for issuance of both building permit and curb-cutting permit.

A ZONING APPEAL IS FILED.

Attorneys for the South Central Business Association filed with the board of zoning appeals today a formal notice of appeal from the decision of the superintendent of buildings granting the building permit.

The appeal will be heard by the board October 2. W. H. Allen, assistant city counselor, advised city officials that the filing of the appeal would act as a stay against any further steps in the filling station matter until it had been heard by the board and a decision made.

The appeal was signed by Hugo Brecklein, Joseph C. Wirthman and W. W. Goodwin, property owners in the Linwood-Troost district and members of the South Central Business Association.

It sets forth to the board of appeals numerous reasons for refusing the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company a permit for the erection of a 6-pump gasoline filling station on the boulevard site.

The creation of additional traffic hazards, fire hazards and its detrimental effect to property values in the immediate neighborhood are stressed. It points out that the filling station would not contribute to the "health, safety, morals and general welfare of the public," the prime purposes of zoning. Even the building plan is the subject of criticism. The appeal asserts the building and its use would be out of harmony with the surroundings.

PRAISES A BOND PLAN

TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE INDORSES SCHOOL BOARD'S MOVE.

In a Letter, Pierre R. Porter, Secretary, Assures Education Heads of Support From His Association.

The Taxpayers' League has indorsed the proposal by the board of education to issue 5 million dollars in bonds for building purposes.

Pierre R. Porter, secretary and counsel of the Taxpayers' League, in a letter to Edwin C. Meservey, president of the board of education, tells of the league's approval of the proposed issuance of bonds.

The school board's plan to distribute sale of the bonds from year to year to take the place of outstanding bonds retired by payment from the sinking fund is especially attractive to the Taxpayers' League, according to Mr. Porter. The league was influenced in its decision to favor the bond proposal by the public statement by the board of education that all the bonds would not be sold immediately.

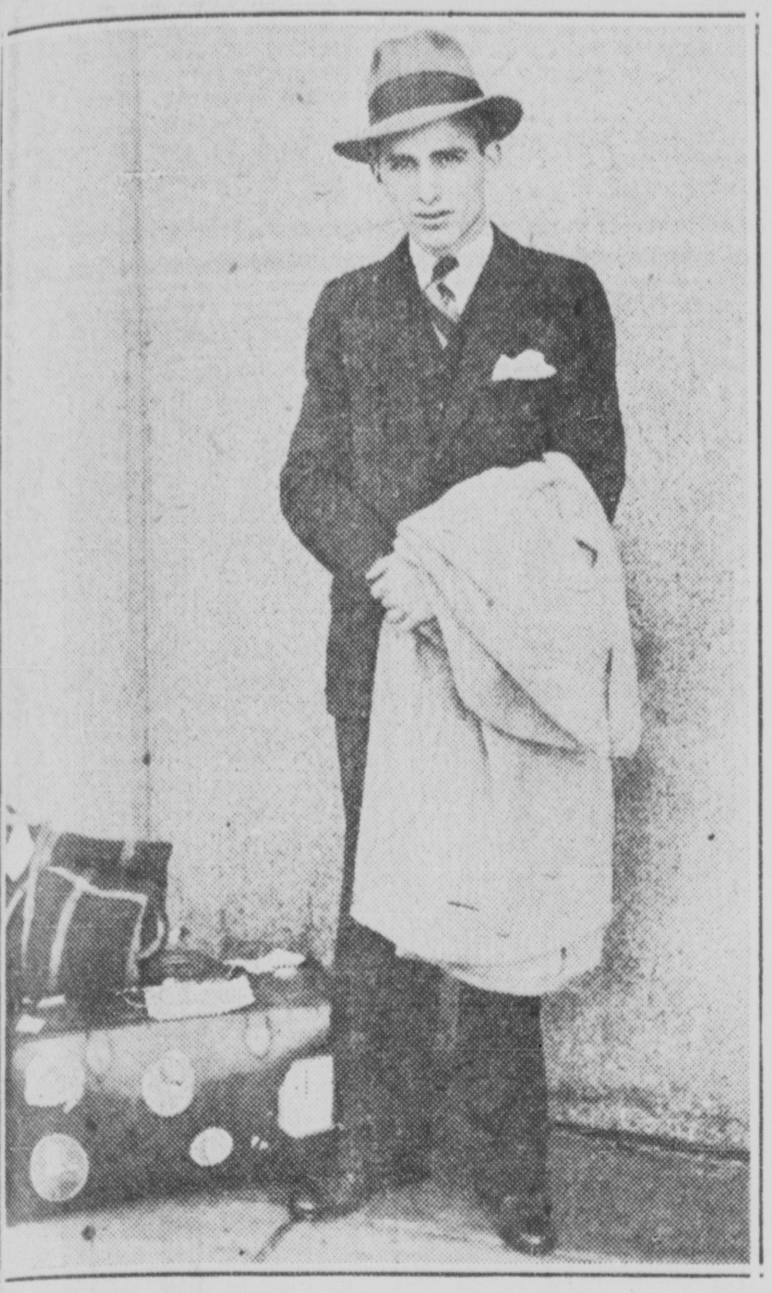
BEN W. SWOFFORD, ORATOR, WHO ARRIVED HOME TODAY.



The photograph reproduced above shows how Ben Swofford, national high school oratorical champion, appeared upon his arrival today at the union station. His luggage was well marked with hotel and steamship stickers from his trip of three months in South America. He said he was glad to be home again.

BEN SWOFFORD IS HOME

HUGS AND KISSES GREET THE CHAMPION ORATOR TODAY.

After a Three Months' Tour of South America, He Tells Those at the Station He Is Happy to Return.

Ben W. Swofford, national high school oratorical champion, arrived home today after a trip to South America. He was given a big welcome at the union station.

"Hello, everybody!" Ben shouted as he walked into the crowded union station lobby. Several relatives and friends of Ben were there to greet him, but travelers who had read of Ben or had heard him give an oration joined in the ovation.

Ben recognized his mother in the crowd first of all. He ran into her arms and kissed and hugged her. Mr. Swofford was unable to be at the station.

With Mrs. Swofford at the station were Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Swofford, Ben's grandparents; Miss Fay White, niece of Ben's mother; Robert Swofford, his cousin; Miss Martha Cary, Mrs. Marvin R. Cary and William Finlay, friends of Ben. Several high school friends also were there.

After greeting his relatives, Ben spent a few minutes with Miss Martha Cary, his sweetheart. Ben kissed her, too.

"I had a wonderful trip," Ben said. "I wouldn't have missed the opportunity for anything. Tell everybody hello and say I am glad to be back home."

Ben had been away on the South American trip three months. Seven other young persons who had reached the national oratorical finals were with Ben on the trip. They visited Cuba, the first stop after sailing July 5 from Jacksonville, Fla., passed through the Panama Canal and went down the west coast of South America. They crossed the continent to Buenos Aires and returned along the east coast, reaching New York Tuesday night.

JAM IN G. O. P. CAMPAIGN

SILENCE COMPLICATES THE RACE IN MAINE AND MASSACHUSETTS.

Word From Senators Gould and Gillett Is Awaited to Clear Up the New England Situation.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The silence of Senators Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts and Arthur R. Gould of Maine as to whether they will be candidates for renomination, is complicating the Republican political situation in New England.

The situation in Massachusetts is of particular interest both because of the factional differences within the party organization and the appearance of contingent candidates—former Governor Alvan T. Fuller and Eben S. Draper, who polled around 140,000 votes in the last Republican senatorial primary. The contingency is whether Senator Gillett offers for renomination.

SAY COOLIDGE WON'T RUN.

Senator Gillett, who will be 78 years old next month, is keeping his own counsel as to his intentions, although some time ago he was quoted as having said he would retire from the field if former President Coolidge desired to offer for the senate. The consensus among Republican leaders here generally is that Mr. Coolidge will not enter the senatorial political arena.

In Maine, two candidates for the Republican nomination to the place now held by Mr. Gould are in the field—Representative Wallace H. White, who served twelve years in the house, and ex-Governor Ralph O. Brewster. While Senator Gould gave out a statement in Paris some time ago he would not be a candidate to succeed himself unless this should become necessary to defeat Mr. Brewster, he declines now to indicate whether he will run.

"I will make my position clear at the proper time," he said.

However, a number of his friends believe he will seek to continue in the place to which he was elected three years ago to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Fernald.

DEMOCRATIC HOPES ARE HIGH.

Taking advantage of the situation in Massachusetts, the Democrats are planning a vigorous campaign and entertain high hopes of electing a man to the senate to sit with David I. Walsh. There is some talk the principal candidates for the Democratic nomination will be ex-Mayor Sydney Peters of Boston and Marcus Coolidge of Fitchburg.

In Rhode Island the Republicans have composed internal differences and Senator Metcalf is expected to be renominated without opposition. He will be opposed by Peter G. Gerry, Democrat, who was defeated last November after long service in the senate.

Senatorial elections also are to be held next year in New Hampshire, with the possibility that ex-Governor John G. Winant will oppose Senator Keyes for the Republican nomination. The Republicans anticipate no difficulty in both New Hampshire and Maine in the general election.

Vermont and Connecticut, the other two New England States, hold their senatorial elections in 1932.

W. L. Brock, the Disappointed Sweetheart, Among Prison Group.

One bus leaving Kansas City today for Jefferson City carried as one-way passengers twenty-seven persons convicted of crime and sentenced to the state penitentiary. Twelve of them were Negroes. There was one deputy sheriff for each three prisoners.

Three of them, each sentenced to serve two years, were convicted of carrying concealed weapons. They were Earl Smith, Jess L. Taber and David M. Lynn.

Among the prisoners was the disappointed W. L. Brock, who was brought back from Fort Worth, where he had found a rich widow after months of negotiating with matrimonial agencies in a search for a prospective bride of wealth. His arrest delayed his courtship at least twenty years. He pleaded guilty to two charges of robbery.

Wilbur Crites, sentenced to ten years for forgery, will not be a stranger to prison regulations. Since his release from the penitentiary in 1927 he had passed 1,000 spurious checks, he confessed.

Among the prisoners was Elmer Schade, who attracted considerable attention recently through the attempted sale of an infant child. Schade will serve two years on a bigamy charge.

Joe Andrews, 19 years old, sentenced to twenty years for assault with intent to rob, and Dan Ferguson, who drew three years on a manslaughter charge, also were among the prisoners.

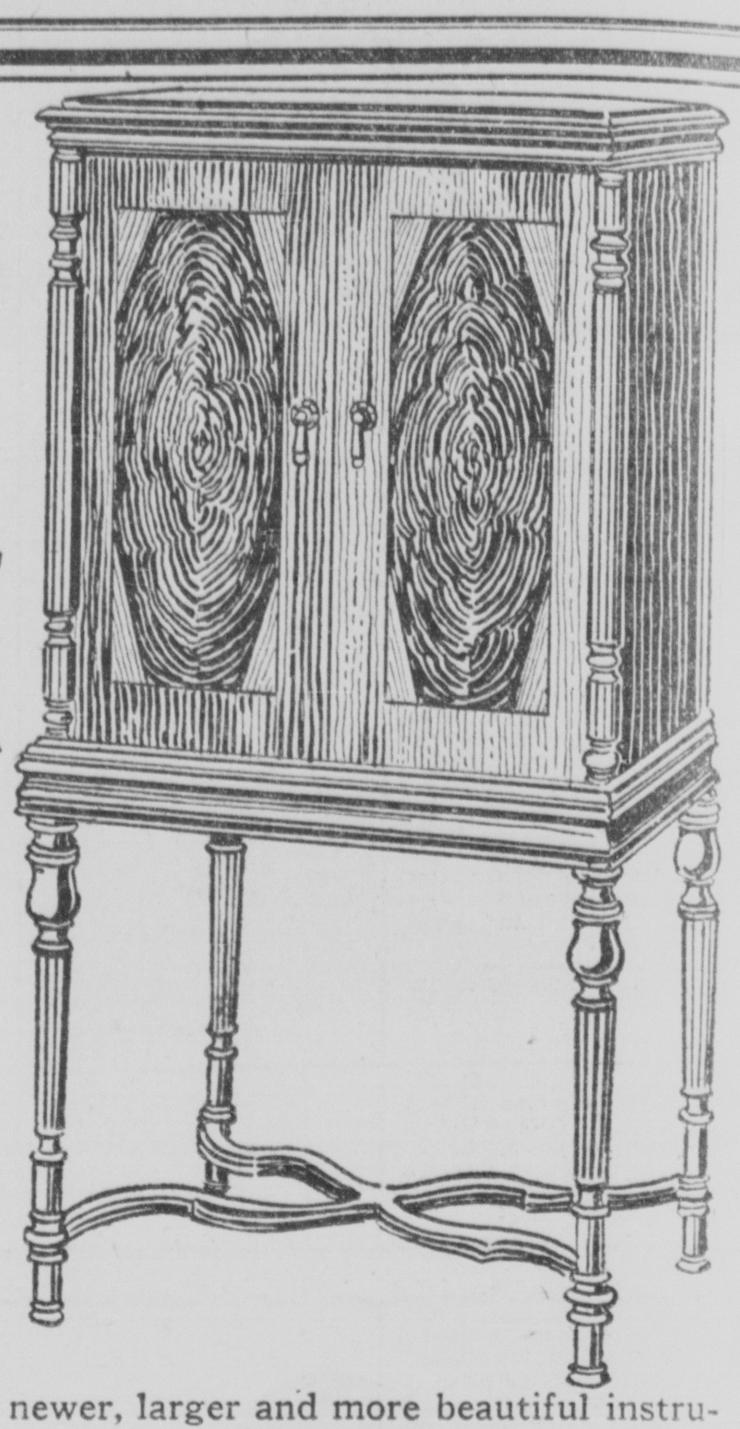
MICRO SYNCHRONOUS
VICTOR RADIO
IN A New AND Luxurious CABINET



THE development of Victor Micro-synchronous Radio gave to the radio receiver, over night, an entirely new standing in the homes of Americans of discriminating tastes. Victor Radio was discovered as quite beyond the stage of novelty . . . experiment . . . or even of scientific discovery and achievement. "Here at last," people said, "is a radio that is really a musical instrument!"

And now the same great Victor engineers and designers have brought into being a newer, larger and more beautiful instrument in which matched butt walnut veneers are used with striking effect in the inlaid medallions of the doors; finest American walnut gives a richly lustrous surface to the body of the cabinet, and the bandings are of selected clear walnut. Inside, panels of bird's-eye maple are beautifully worked into the design, and walnut again appears as the dominating color and texture. All wood surfaces are given the modern blended finish. Hardware of antique brass finish.

New electro-dynamic speaker, exclusively Victor.
New type Radiotrons. More power with economy.
Ten Radiotrons in set.
Victor development of proven basic circuit.
Unparalleled sensitivity, selectivity, fidelity.

OVER THE IOWA BYPATHS

THE GOOD WILL TRIPPERS SPEND A MORNING ON DETOURS.

At One of the Towns Visited by the C. of C. a "Better Hog" Celebration Is Under Way as Tourists Arrive.

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

CRESTON, IA., Sept. 26.—After a twisting and turning morning ride from Red Oak over the detours that are serving as Iowa motor roads, pending the construction of one of the most promising highway systems in the middle West, Kansas City's good will trade tour caravan arrived here shortly before noon.

Perhaps the largest and most enthusiastic crowd of the entire trip was that which met the trippers today at Lenox, the home town of Virgil D. Davidson, secretary-treasurer of the Davidson Meat and Provision Company. Mr. Davidson made the Kansas City speech to his home folks and introduced Mayor G. W. Black. H. C. Killion, president of the Lenox Chamber of Commerce, presided.

On the way from Lenox to Preston a 2-minute stop was made at Kent, a village where a large crowd had gathered.

The first stop today was at Villisca, Ia. There P. E. Lomas is president of the Chamber of Commerce. There, too, high school girls collect autographs on their white street jackets. Several of the Kansas City trippers left their names there.

At Corning the streets were roped off for the trippers' parade and because of a "better hog" train that was making a stop there at the same time. The white way poles were decorated with stalks of corn and pumpkins.

Wife and Another Man Are Found Killed in Home.

GALESBURG, ILL., Sept. 26.—The bodies of Mrs. Mary Hawkinson, 42, and a man believed to be George Martin, 35, of Dayton, O., were found by police in the Hawkinson home here today. Both had been shot and their throats slashed with a razor.

The body of Mrs. Hawkinson was found in bed, while that of Martin was on the floor. Both were fully clothed.

The bodies were found by Albert Hawkinson, husband of the woman. When police arrived at the home in response to Hawkinson's appeal they allege they found Hawkinson in an intoxicated condition. He was taken in charge by the sheriff and is being held for questioning. He denies complicity.

AUTUMN DRENCHES MISSOURI IN A RAINBOW OF BRILLIANT HUES

(By The Star's Missouri Correspondent.)

CARROLLTON, MO., Sept. 26.—With the tint of autumn across its hills, valleys and plains, Missouri today presents a picture of contentment framed in gold, yellow and brown.

A veritable rainbow of colors greets the wayfarer, who is challenged by the scenes Nature is leaving in its path of season changing. Endless fields of Spanish needle, the little flower which suggests yellow daisies and is the last to bow to the nip of frost, line the highways and dot the countryside. Tree-covered hills are beginning to fade from solid green into a medley of brilliant hues, swaying in the breezes as though demonstrating the season's offering in mixed colors.

Much corn is in the shock, while other fields of late planting continue to bid for Nature's aid so they might yet mature and return a reward for the weeks of labor involved. A late fall with delayed frost is the hope of farmers in many, many districts. Crops generally, and corn in particular, are not up to former standards. If severe weather holds off awhile, there are sections that yet can make a 60 per cent corn yield. This is true in many counties bordering the river. The combination of a wet spring and a dry summer reduced both acreage and yield.

Fortunately in numerous districts where other crops fell down, a good hay yield will prove a material aid to stock raisers. Also, late rains refreshed pasture lands and helped farmers specializing in cattle feeding. Parts of northwest, southeastern and some of the river counties of Missouri have had a fair year, despite the setback earlier in the season.

However, the farmer generally will not close his books with the greatest satisfaction in regard to the customary crops which make up the backbone of agricultural activities in Missouri, such as wheat, corn and oats.

In that regard it is noticeable farmers of the state are branching out more and more for diversification in their operations, and depending less on the old standby crops. For some time farmers in the south, Ozark and northwest sections have added other lines to their agricultural efforts as insurance against crop failures and also as a means of realizing ready money between seasons.

Several sections in which little interest before had been displayed outside the customary lines now are slowly stepping into the field of diversification. This is true in such counties as Saline and some of its neighbors, where banner corn crops grow. Creameries, milk condensing plants and similar operations are springing up. Indications are Missouri in the next few years will make great strides along such lines, not only as a means of offsetting bad crop years, but in realizing the most from the soil from every angle.

Despite reverses here and there, Missouri is glancing ahead and not backward, and certainly the countryside, wrapped in a cloak of early fall, presents an attractiveness and freshness no artist can rival.

CONVICTION PUTS MRS. PANTAGES UNDER MEDICAL CARE.

Wealthy Husband of the Woman Whose Car Caused Death of Japanese Is in Tears as Sensational Trial Is Closed.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—Mrs. Lois Pantages, convicted of manslaughter in the death of a Japanese gardener, after a collision of their motor cars, was under the care of physicians today. The theater magnate's wife fell to the floor in the courtroom where the jury's verdict was read last night and was carried sobbing and screaming from the building.

Superior Judge Carlos Hardy set 2 o'clock tomorrow as the hour of pronouncement of sentence, which is fixed by a California law at from one to ten years. He permitted the woman her freedom under a $50,000 bond posted prior to the trial pending action on motions for probation and a new trial which defense counsel promised.

Alexander T. Pantages, husband of the convicted woman, who himself faces trial October 1 on two statutory charges brought by Eunice Pringle, a young dancer, sat through the final episode of the sensational trial with tears streaming down his face. The multimillionaire vaudeville impresario was unable to help his wife out of the courtroom after she became hysterical and fell at his feet.

One of the outgrowths of the sensational trial was the beginning of contempt of court proceedings against Dr. R. P. (Fighting Bob) Shuler, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, South, in Los Angeles, and the Rev. Gustav Briegleb, another prominent pastor here.

Dr. Shuler and Mr. Briegleb were accused of deliberately casting reflections upon the integrity of the jury which convicted Mrs. Pantages. At the time the jury was selected Dr. Shuler, in a speech broadcast by the radio station of his church, was alleged to have said the jury was hung before the taking of testimony had begun, and that he could name the man who would hang it. Mr. Briegleb was accused of having made similar statements from his pulpit in St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Judge Hardy has ordered the two ministers to appear Monday to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt.

ABILENE IS 60 YEARS OLD.

(By The Star's Own Service.)

ABILENE, KAS., Sept. 26.—The sixtieth anniversary of the incorporation of Abilene was celebrated today at the free fair grounds with a program at which Brig. Gen. A. G. Lott, commandant at Ft. Riley; Mayor E. L. Hoffman, and C. M. Harger were the speakers. The town was incorporated by forty-four residents in September, 1869, two years after the cattle trail had made it a shipping point for Texas cattle. The first mayor was T. C. Henry, later known as the wheat king of Kansas. Tom Smith was the first marshal, to be succeeded by "Wild Bill" Hickok after the former had been killed making an arrest.

The Central Kansas free fair, which opened today, had the largest opening attendance in the fair's history. Exhibitions and drills by 500 cavalry troops from Ft. Riley are an attraction, and tonight there will be boxing matches by professionals from surrounding towns.

SPEAKING THE PUBLIC MIND

Kansans Don't Like Wet Propagandists.

To The Star: I wish to thank you for your defense of prohibition in Kansas in your editorial in the morning issue of The Star September 20 entitled "Kansas—There She Stands." We Kansans, even Kansans by adoption, are proud of our achievements. And we do not relish the writings of the wet propagandists.

J. H. CARGILL.

Pedestrians and Safety Zones.

To The Star: In the discussion as to whether or not motor cars should be allowed to run through safety zones, we note almost all who have expressed views through these columns are motorists, and express the motorists' view. The principal objection to the closed zone is that it forces the driver through a "bottleneck," thus retarding his speed and causing loss of time. In other words, it interferes with his "right of way." The objection applies equally as well to the stop lights at street intersections; they, too, halt traffic and interfere with continuous progress.

In all the communications I have read on the subject, I have seen none giving the pedestrian's view. In fact, one would conclude that there were no pedestrians or street car patrons.

I ride the street cars daily; I board them on Linwood west of Main, or on Main south of Linwood. At both places there are safety zones. The traffic is heavy both ways, and in order to catch his street car, especially during rush hours, one must watch for a break in the line of motor cars and run for the safety zone, then wait until the car comes. If motor cars are allowed to run through the zones, even this chance will be denied. I often miss my car because there is no break in the motor traffic through which one can dodge.

The advocates of the open zone assume that motorists would not impinge upon the zones proper, outside the rails; this would leave a strip 24 to 30 inches wide for street car patrons, and as every day many cars are driven through safety zones in violation of law, so would they be driven through the zones outside the rails.

The opening of the safety zones will remove the only safeguard left for the protection of pedestrians and street car patrons. We can figure out only one way in which the problem can be handled in case the zones are opened to motor traffic, and that is: arrange the street car stops about three miles apart; then load them through a chute from an overhead platform and unload them through a chute into a subway. As for the person who wants to play pedestrian, he can walk around and around a block, and will not need to cross a street; the chances are that he would not get across if he started.

W. F. DONALDSON.

107 West Linwood boulevard.

[Editor's Note: Safety zones are approximately twice the width mentioned by the writer. In articles printed in The Star, officials of the Safety Council and others have stressed the necessity of protecting the pedestrian if the car tracks between safety zones are to be used by motorists. They are so used in large numbers of other cities, with no apparent increase in pedestrian hazards, where the danger end of the safety zone is so obstructed as to make it a hazard for the motorist himself who attempts to enter it.]

Pleasure Craft on the Improved Rivers.

To The Star: Few people are aware of the wonderful opportunities to travel by boat that are in store for residents of this part of the country through development of the river channels and similar improvements. What is coming is a waterways system penetrating the areas of the middle West that will be as useful for passenger craft as for the transportation of freight.

In a few years from now, for example, one may step into a motor boat at the foot of Main street in Kansas City and travel by water all the way to Brownsville, Tex., the farthest south of any city in the United States. This will be made possible through construction of the intercoastal canal, an inland waterway from the Mississippi to the Rio Grande. This canal leaves the Mississippi at a point north of New Orleans and cuts through the land to Galveston Bay. According to S. E. Holland, president of the Intercoastal Canal Association, this project now is assured, at an estimated cost of 16 million dollars. This canal will render a great service to the territory it traverses, not only affording cheaper freight rates to shippers but possibilities of pleasure use as well.

Finds Increased Music Study.

To The Star: I should like to add just a few words to what was said in The Star of Tuesday by the Kansas City Music Teachers' Federation about the study of music. The position there taken is absolutely correct. There are more children studying music today then ever before, in the public schools and elsewhere. In the Chicago schools there are 20,000 studying music, being a larger number of piano pupils than all the rest combined. And the grades of those who study music show a higher average than do those of pupils not studying it.

So if "Our Little Nell" has gone it can only be for a short vacation. She will surely come back, stronger and better than ever. And why not? Music is the one universal language by which all peoples of the world may understand one another. It is a culture of the highest type. I only wish we had more good music in Kansas City, say a good symphony orchestra.

RYAN AGAIN HEADS CARMEN.

Veteran Leader of Brotherhood Is Chosen by Acclamation.

Martin F. Ryan, Kansas City, was re-elected today by acclamation for another four years as general president of the Railway Carmen of America. He takes office under the re-election January 1 and will then begin his twenty-third year as head of the organization.

There was no opposition to Mr. Ryan. In fact there has been little sign of divided opinion in the election as far as it has proceeded. The session of the carmen, in progress for a week, has been singularly free of dissension.

Other officers elected today, all by acclamation:

F. H. Knight, Kansas City, assistant general president.

J. M. Ellis, Kansas City, general secretary and treasurer.

Frank McKenna, Vancouver, B. C., general vice-president for Western Canada.

John F. McCreery, Paducah, Ky., vice-president.

D. J. Collins, Boston, vice-president.

Irvin Barney, Chicago, vice-president.

The carmen still have numerous elections to make. Included are six more vice-presidents, five delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention and two delegates to the Trade and Labor Congress of Canada, both of which will be at Toronto October 8, and the editor of the official organization publication.

Indications are the carmen will close their general meeting Saturday.

FARM AID IN MARKETING

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS GET JAMES STONE'S INDORSEMENT.

The Vice-Chairman of the Federal Board Says He Is Free of All Business Interests to Serve in New Work.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—James C. Stone of Kentucky informed the senate agricultural committee today that as vice-chairman of the federal farm board he could give a lifetime experience in tobacco raising and marketing toward solving the farm problem.

Appearing as the first witness at today's hearing, he said he had relieved himself of all outside connections and that he had no financial interest in the processing or storage of tobacco. He said the tobacco growers had not yet asked for any financial assistance, but had begun to form a strong central marketing agency.

The committee is considering the nominations of the farm board members who have been serving under recess appointments. The committee yesterday concluded two days of questioning Chairman Legge.

In response to a question by Senator Smith of South Carolina, whether tobacco growers would not benefit by a closer association with the manufacturers in disposing of their crop through a central marketing agency, the vice-chairman replied this objective undoubtedly should be sought. If real business methods are introduced in co-operative marketing, Stone added, a better price can be demanded.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, Republican, read what he said was testimony in the Sapiro-Ford libel suit in which a witness accused Stone of selling his warehouse, purchased for $165,000 in 1916, to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, of which he was president, for $225,000, in 1921.

The witness in the libel suit, who, Brookhart said, was named Buckley, was quoted by the senator as testifying that Stone had urged him (Buckley) to help organize the co-operative because they would both get good positions at good salaries.

A WOMEN VOTERS' MEETING.

Missouri Board Is at the Brookside Hotel for Two Days.

The League of Women Voters is interested in equalizing educational opportunities throughout the state and in taxation as it affects educational facilities in the state.

A memorial fund to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the organization also will be discussed.

A Lineman Gets 6,600 Volts.

Charles Berry, a lineman for the Kansas City, Clay County & St. Joseph railway, was burned badly today when he grasped a cable carrying 6,600 volts of electricity. He was working on a power line pole at Armour road and Swift avenue in North Kansas City. His safety belt prevented him from falling. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital in an ambulance.

The NEW 50c Colgate Toothbrush

GIVEN AWAY

$1.00 value for 50c

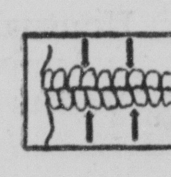
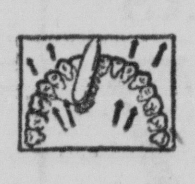
SAVE 50 CENTS

The Colgate brush has amazing penetrating, cleansing power . . . because the bristles are scientifically serrated . . . tufted . . . to get into the tiny fissures, crevices and hard-to-reach places where ordinary toothbrushes fail to penetrate.

Brush teeth with this up and down motion, advise dentists. The new Colgate Toothbrush was specially designed to make this action doubly effective. Do not brush across the teeth.





When you brush your teeth on the inside, use an in-and-out stroke. Note how wonderfully the firm bristles invigorate the gums.

FREE OFFER: To induce still more people to try Ribbon Dental Cream . . . the scientific dentifrice with the foaming, penetrating action . . . we make this remarkable offer. Only Colgate . . . world's largest maker of tooth paste . . . could finance such a proposition. The resources and guarantee of this hundred-million-dollar firm are behind this deal. There is no "catch" to this offer. Colgate simply wants you to try Ribbon Dental Cream. To repay you for doing this, we offer you a genuine new Colgate Toothbrush . . . as described . . . actual value 50 cents . . . ABSOLUTELY FREE!

The brush

This tooth brush — the newest, most advanced type known to dental science — was designed by the Colgate Department of Dental Education . . . a group of dentists who have studied the needs of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children.

Examine this brush. Study its shape, its size, its bristles. It is made by skilled American workers . . . under the most sanitary conditions . . . from selected, imported snow-white bristles of finest quality. Every brush is carefully inspected. Handles are of lovely transparent material, in 5 exquisite shades of green, purple, amber. Bristles are held in a firm vise-like grip that never loosens.

This brush is identical in quality, in size, in durability to nationally advertised brushes that sell regularly in the better stores at 50c. Now yours free with this unique offer.

The dentifrice

Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream is the world's largest-selling tooth paste. More people use it . . . and more dentists recommend it . . . than any other dentifrice.

The reason for this is simply that Colgate's cleans teeth better. Colgate's contains the world's best cleansing agent — a penetrating foam that cleanses where the toothbrush cannot reach.

Your dentist will tell you that decay doesn't start on the smooth outer surfaces of the teeth . . . but in the tiny crevices where food particles and mucin collect.

No tooth brush can reach these hard-to-clean places. They must be cleansed by the dentifrice. Hence the real test of a tooth paste is its ability to get down into these crevices and cleanse them thoroughly. A scientific test recently proved that Colgate's has greater penetrating power than any of the leading tooth pastes on the market today—the secret of Colgate's superior cleansing power.

The foam of Colgate's carries a fine chalk powder . . . a polishing material prescribed by dentists . . . which polishes the enamel safely, brilliantly.

The Colgate method of scientific tooth brushing

After years of study and thousands of experiments, the Colgate Method of scientifically cleansing the teeth has been developed by the Colgate Dept. of Dental Education.

This Method is most effective when Ribbon Dental Cream is brushed on with the Colgate Brush. For the springy, serrated bristles, set at exactly the right distance, act in a way that applies the full, concentrated cleansing power of the famous Colgate foam . . . deep down into the "hard-to-clean" places. Only thus can you be sure of cleaning these difficult spots where decay lurks.

Start today to use the Colgate Method of Scientific Tooth Brushing . . . and note the difference in your teeth ten days hence.

NOTE!

This offer is strictly limited. The supply of brushes has been rigidly allotted to the stores which are co-operating in this great offer. They will not last long . . . once people read this announcement. So, act NOW! It may be months or even years before we can repeat this amazing proposition.

STILL A QUIET HONEYMOON.

Florence and John Visit in Ex-President's Birthplace.

(By the Associated Press.)

PLYMOUTH, VT., Sept. 26.—John Coolidge and his bride continued today to enjoy the quiet of life in this hamlet, where the thirtieth President of the United States was born.

Thanks to the industry of 91-year-old Mrs. Harriett M. Moore, a cousin of John's grandfather, the late Col. John Coolidge, the honeymooners have added to their gifts one whose sentimental associations will probably outweigh the monetary value of many more pretentious presents.

It is a braided rag rug which Mrs. Moore started to make early last Monday, the day the former President's son took as his bride Florence Trumbull, daughter of Connecticut's governor. Mrs. Moore presented it to the Coolidges at the ancestral home where they have been staying.

John and Florence drove to Rutland yesterday, sharing their roadster's seat with Miss Aurora Pierce, housekeeper at the homestead for many years, who availed herself of the opportunity to consult an oculist.

There has been no indication as to how long they will continue to sojourn here or what their plans are.

MUD HOMES GO IN FLOOD

ONLY THREE BUILDINGS REMAIN IN SAN MARCIAL, N. M.

Boats Rescue All Believed to Be in Peril and Red Cross Prepares to Aid the 200 Refugees.

(By the Associated Press.)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 26.—Muddy waters of the Rio Grande today sloshed about three buildings, all that remained of San Marcial, N. M., once a town of 1,400. In foothills, across a broad expanse of flood waters loosed by heavy rain which swelled the Rio Grande to burst through dikes at San Marcial, were 200 refugees, some of whom had left before the flood, and fifty-four who were rescued yesterday by boats.

The fifty-four were marooned in the three remaining buildings—the Santa Fe depot, Harvey House and a bank. The buildings they occupied were standing in from five to eight feet of water.

Most of the refugees were without food or shelter. Thus far death and sickness had not appeared, but if outside aid is not forthcoming, apprehension for the future is felt. The Red Cross will make an effort today to reach the refugees with tents and supplies.

Characteristic of the towns of the Southwest, there are many adobe houses. These melted into nothingness with the advent of the water. The Santa Fe railroad suffered a heavy loss with the tracks washed out and a freight train upset when the roadway was destroyed.

Late last night a report was received that the water was receding. This is San Marcial's second destructive flood, the first coming in August this year. Socorro and San Antonio, both New Mexico villages north of San Marcial on the Rio Grande, have been destroyed by two floods.

INTO COTTON REPORT ERROR.

Heflin Demands Information About Price Depressing Mistake.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—A resolution to request the census bureau to tell the senate how an error in its cotton report of September 23 occurred, and what steps had been taken to prevent a recurrence, was introduced today by Senator Heflin of Alabama, Democrat, but action was deferred.

The cotton report of the census bureau listed 300,000 bales more than had been ginned September 23, which, the resolution asserted, "resulted in depressing the price." The error was corrected later in the day by the bureau.

Good FOOD is a good protector

Those young people are healthiest and happiest who eat enough. Sugar in improving the flavor of healthful foods induces us to eat a sufficient amount, and to enjoy eating.

To keep young bodies strong—to strengthen young lungs against tuberculosis—to give the children strength to face rainy days and chilly days, school-year in and school-year out . . . urge that they eat enough.

Vegetables, cereals, fruits, milk—all these are daily essentials. If vegetables are bland in flavor, add a dash of sugar to the string beans when put on to cook . . . or to the peas . . . to the spinach . . . to the carrots, and they will emerge so well-flavored that children and adults will like them. Sugar brings out flavor in cooking, mellowing this, accentuating that one.

Tasty desserts—puddings, pies, ice cream, candy and cakes—have their place in every well-balanced diet. Have them daily. You can get them at your grocer's and bake shops of just as fine quality as if you made them at home.

Remember that sugar is a quick energy nutrient to feed the active energies of busy people. With sugar as a flavor people enjoy the varied foods so necessary to our well being. Sugar, Nature's perfect flavor, increases the pleasure of eating. The Sugar Institute.

U. S. GRANT, JR., IS DEAD

END COMES IN HIS SLEEP TO SON OF THE LATE PRESIDENT.

Devoting His Life to the Study of Law, He Took Only a Passive Interest in Politics.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Sept. 26.—Ulysses S. Grant, jr., son of the late Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, died last night at Sandberg Lodge, seventy miles north of Los Angeles, said a message received here today by his son-in-law, Edmund C. King. No details were contained in the message, other than that Mr. Grant had died while asleep, probably a victim of a heart attack.

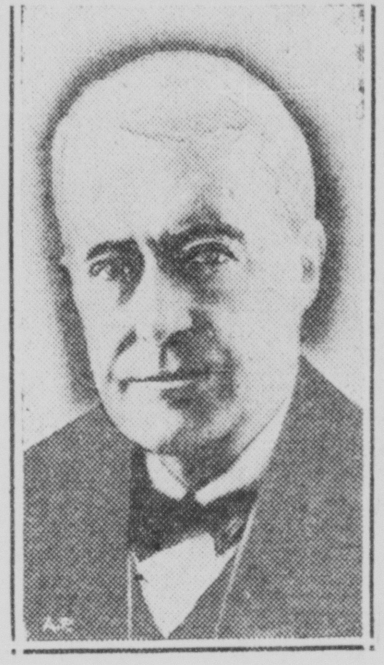
He engaged in the latter activity in California, where he had resided since 1893, and at one time was the largest taxpayer in San Diego County.

His interest in politics was merely passive. He served as the President's secretary in the last year and a half of his father's second term in the White House, after which he devoted his entire time to his law practice. From California he was chosen a delegate-at-large to the Republican national conventions of 1896 and 1900, and was a presidential elector-at-large from that state in 1904 and 1908.

At the close of the second Grant administration, the son, Ulysses, established himself in New York, where he maintained a law office seventeen years. In 1893 his first wife's health became impaired, necessitating a change in climate, and the family removed to San Diego, Cal.

ENTERED REAL ESTATE.



ULYSSES S. GRANT, JR.

On the Pacific Coast, Mr. Grant continued his law practice, interested himself in civic affairs and engaged in real estate activities, which eventually became extensive. He constructed the U. S. Grant hotel, the first large re-enforced concrete building in San Diego. He maintained his home at the hotel.

Ulysses Simpson Grant, jr., was born at Bethel, O., July 22, 1852. At the time his father, then a lieutenant in the army, was with the Fourth Regiment on a march across the Isthmus of Panama. The regiment, which sailed from New York, was on the way to California, where the influx of gold seekers made it advisable to have troops present. Mrs. Grant was anxious to accompany her husband on the trip, but was persuaded to remain behind. She lived for a time at the home of her father-in-law, where Ulysses was born.

STUDIED AT HARVARD.

Because of the army assignments of General Grant, his unsuccessful business ventures in St. Louis and Galena, Ill., and then his service during the Civil War, the Grant home was a sort of unsettled institution until after peace had been declared. With the family reunited in Washington, Ulysses, jr., attended Emerson Institute. He prepared at Exeter academy for Harvard university, where he was graduated in 1874, and then took the law course at Columbia university. In 1876 he was admitted to the New York bar.

November 1, 1880, Mr. Grant married Miss Josephine Chaffee, daughter of United States Senator Jerome B. Chaffee of Colorado. They had three daughters and two sons. Mrs. Grant died at San Diego, Cal., November 9, 1909. Four years later, on July 12, 1913, Mr. Grant married Mrs. America Wills, widow of A. B. Wills of Marshalltown, Ia.

During the latter years of his life Mr. Grant directed most of his attention to his real estate interests. He and Mrs. Grant were devotees of outdoor recreations and spent much time in automobiling and extended travel.

SAYS WASHINGTON IS DRIER.

Conditions Are 50 Per Cent Better Since Hoover's Inauguration.

(By the Associated Press.)

EAGLE GROVE, IA., Sept. 26.—Washington is 50 per cent drier than when Herbert Hoover first took office as President, Deets Pickett, editor of the publication of the Methodist Board for the Enforcement of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, said last night in addressing the Northwest conference of the Methodist church, which is meeting here.

The bettered conditions are due to the quiet influence of President Hoover in government and social circles and to Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, and his expression of sympathy with the Washington enforcement program, Pickett asserted.

The jury set execution by hanging as the penalty after fourteen hours and twenty minutes of deliberation.

As the sentence was announced, Burrows showed no emotion. His foster mother, Mrs. Walter Burrows, wife of a Chicago livestock dealer, collapsed.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 26.—An unidentified man is near death at Stewartsville as the result of a charge of buckshot fired by Gaylor Noblit, a farmer living three miles west of Stewartsville. Noblit heard a noise in his chicken house and, snatching a shotgun, followed a man who ran from the building. The man was shot as he attempted to run. He has refused to give him name. VICTORY FOR WHEAT MEN

SENATOR ALLEN EXPLAINS A TARIFF BILL PROVISION.

Southwest Benefits Especially in Competition for Cuban Market When Practice of Eastern Millers Is Corrected.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — Senator Henry J. Allen in a statement issued today asserted the senate's action in rejecting the report of its finance committee on the "milling in bond" provisions of the tariff bill was "the greatest victory the farmers and millers of wheat growing states have won in congress in the last several years."

The junior Kansas senator referred to the senate's vote, 58 to 18, to retain in the tariff bill sections 311 and 313, as passed by the house of representatives, requiring millers of imported wheat to pay a tax on exports equal to any preferential rate granted by the country receiving the milled product.

GREATER MARKET FOR U. S. WHEAT.

"The enactment of those sections of the tariff bill," Senator Allen said, "according to figures which grain experts have submitted to the senate, will increase the demand for United States grown wheat about 21 million bushels annually. This will be of immense value to farmers and millers of our country who, in years of good crops, have been faced with enormous oversupplies of grain.

"Under the 1922 tariff act certain milling companies in Buffalo, N. Y., have been enjoying a special privilege in respect to the flour trade with Cuba. They have been importing Canadian wheat free of duty, milling it for export under government bond and shipping it to Cuba under the preferential duty granted to the United States.

"This means that these Buffalo mills have been able to produce flour for the Cuban export trade at a cost of 35 cents a barrel lower than the production costs of mills using wheat grown in the United States.

"Sections 311 and 313, as approved by both branches of congress, place the Buffalo millers on the same footing with the Canadian millers. Instead of pocketing their 35 cents a barrel advantage, the American mills using Canadian wheat will pay that money as a tax into the United States treasury.

AID TO SOUTHWESTERN MILLS.

"The Buffalo mills will continue to have an advantage in transportation costs to Cuba, but when the preferential tariff advantage is withdrawn the southwestern mills will be more nearly on an equal basis for competition in the Cuban market.

"The emergency rate now in effect on flour is 42.67 cents a hundred pounds from Buffalo to Cuba. The rate from Kansas City to Cuba is 49 cents a hundred pounds. The southwestern carriers have published schedules naming new export rates from the Southwest, which, if approved by the interstate commerce commission, will continue an adjustment practically equal to the emergency rates.

"The Buffalo millers argued before the finance committee that relatively little high protein wheat suitable for the Cuban trade was raised in the United States. This is ridiculous, since Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas alone raise millions of bushels of high protein wheat every year.

"Kansas and other southwestern millers have been able to satisfy the demands of the flour buyers of the West Indies for several years. There is no good reason why they cannot sell an increasing amount of flour in Cuba if the benefits of the Cuban reciprocal trade treaty are limited to the products of the United States as originally intended.

THE IMPORTS GROW.

"The annual importation of wheat into the United States for milling in bond for export increased from 6,172,837 bushels in the year ending June 30, 1922, to 21,520,000 bushels in the year ending June 30, 1929.

"Meanwhile the flour shipments through New York to Cuba have increased from 331,000 barrels in 1922 to 731,000 barrels in 1928. This represents an increase of 121 per cent.

"The shipments from the balance of the country in the same period decreased from 759,000 barrels in 1922 to 406,000 barrels in 1928, a decline of 47 per cent.

"Approval by both the house and senate of sections 311 and 313 of the tariff bill, with the unanimous support of the Kansas delegation, marks the greatest victory the farmers and millers of the wheat growing states have won in congress in the last several years."

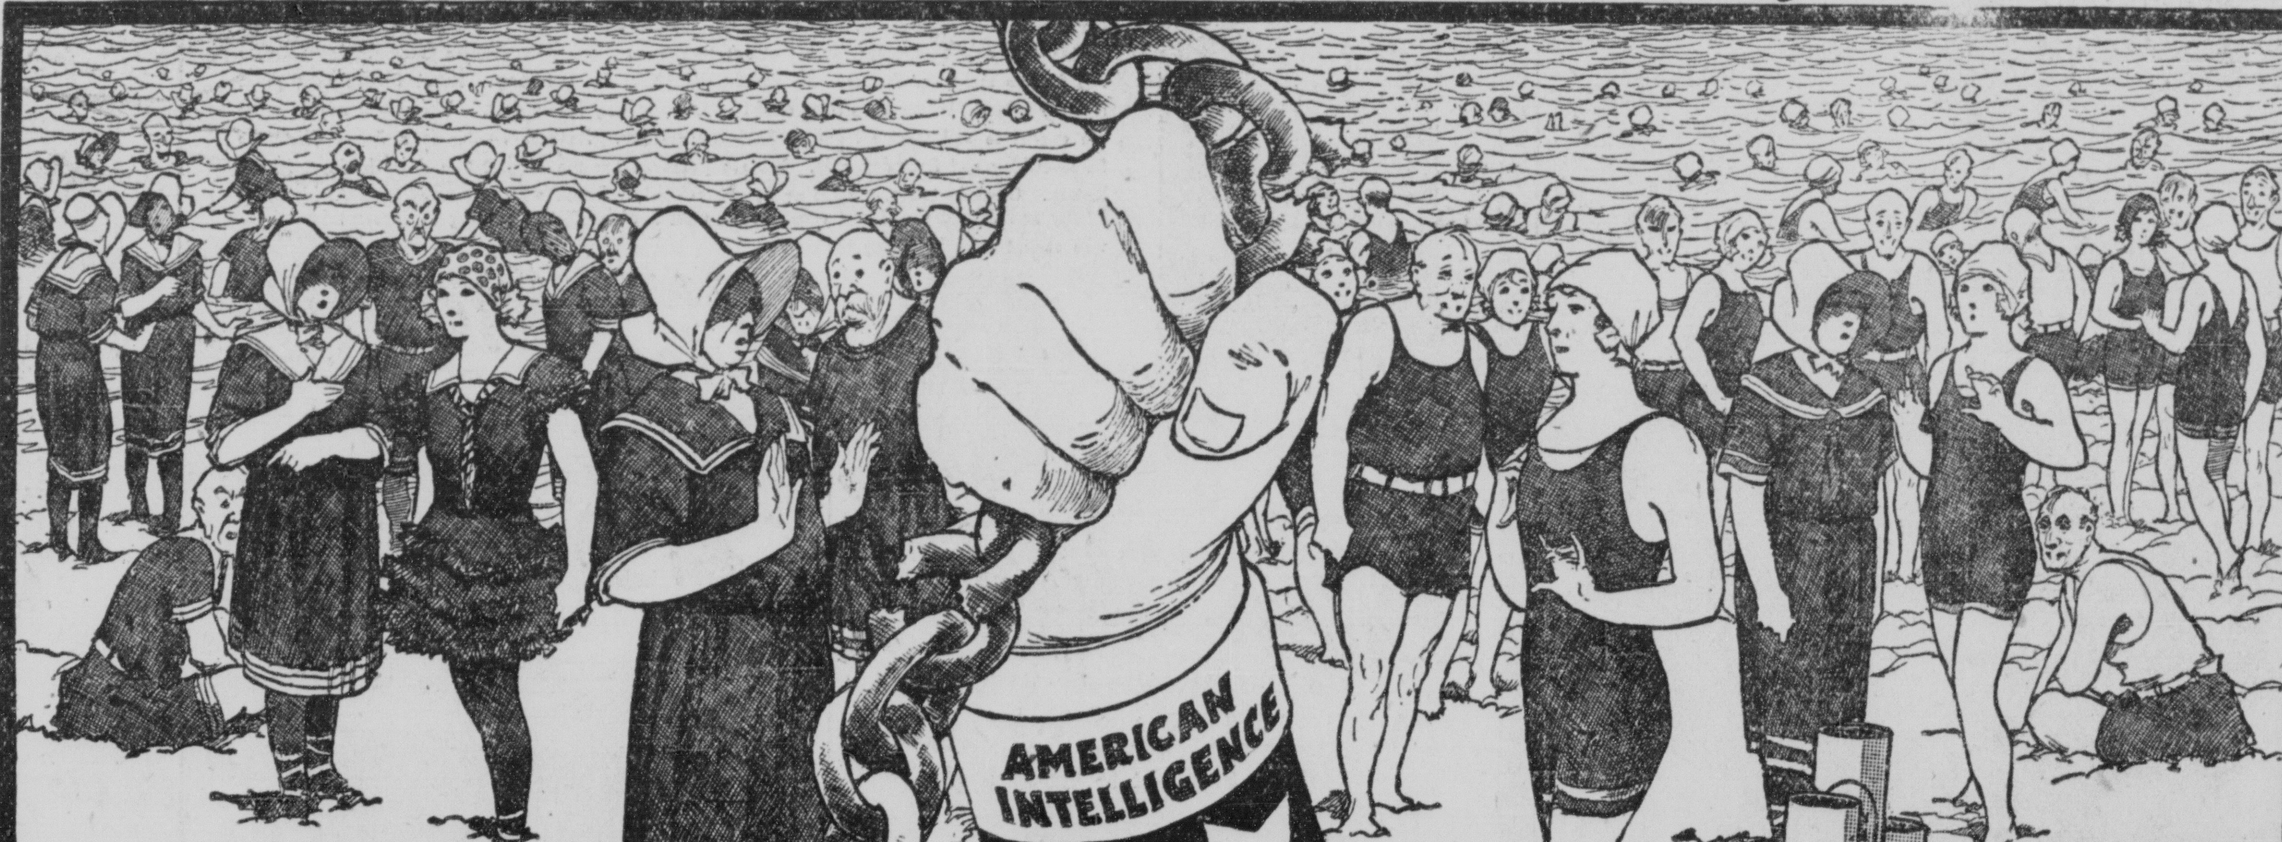
AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

False modesty is a relic of an ancient prejudice. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has cut it away and, in behalf of better health and pure enjoyment, sponsors the fashion of sensible swimming attire.



"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation-No Cough.

TUNE IN—The Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra, every Saturday night, over a coast-to-coast network of the N. B. C.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

The amazing story of the set that has revolutionized RADIO!

WHY does the Atwater Kent Screen-Grid Set give you so much better reception than you have experienced before?

Here's the answer:

Screen-Grid is a new amplifying tube. It solves a problem that has held back the progress of radio for seventeen years.

This problem was: How to make a receiving set more powerful without causing some of the electrical energy within the set to "feed back" and ruin tone quality.

Because Power unlocks the secret of better performance at every point and puts it at your finger tips in the form of lovelier tone, more flexible volume, finer selectivity and longer distance—the four aces of radio.

As engineers racked their brains over the puzzle of forcing more power through a receiver without sacrificing tone, they discovered that it could be done by completely shielding some of the amplifying tubes—shielding them inside and outside, and thus preventing wanton imps of electricity from straying off the road and causing trouble.

That's what Screen-Grid is. Now for the rest of the story.

How a dream came true!

To the Atwater Kent laboratory, one of the great laboratories of the world, came the news that the Screen-Grid tube was perfected. Exciting news! If ever there was a time for action, this was it. AND ATWATER KENT ACTED!

A completely new receiving set was designed to convert all the marvelous possibilities of the new tubes into better reception for the radio listener at every point.

Tubes by themselves are just glass and metal. It isn't merely the tubes that make the new Atwater Kent so much better. It's the way they are used—completely used.

Meanwhile Atwater Kent spent millions of dollars on devising and purchasing new machinery—much of it replacing machines which themselves had been the last word in up-to-dateness only a short time before.

Sets the pace for all others!

On May 1st Atwater Kent announced Screen-Grid Radio, told the public it was a sensational, perfected improvement, and that it could be had in the widest possible choice of exquisite cabinets.

Knowing that an Atwater Kent statement can be taken at its face value, thousands bought the first week and more and more thousands have bought every day since then and are doing it now.

That's the story of Atwater Kent Screen-Grid, the set that has revolutionized radio. Our advice to anyone is: Break any engagement you've got and listen to it. It's just that good! And it doesn't hum!

POWER

under absolute control

A hundred times more power pulsing through every tube! That's what Atwater Kent Screen-Grid means! Mammoth power tamed and harnessed!

Power to pick the faintest waves from the ether and give you even the subtle overtones of music. Power to bring you the living quality of the human voice.

Power to reach out with radio's longest arm and pull those distant stations in. Power to blot out the programs you don't want, bring in those you do.

Power that has banished hum!

Here it is—surge of enormous power—dream of radio engineers—mastered by the skill of science in the Atwater Kent laboratory—under complete control at the tips of your fingers! Why get a copy when you can have the original?

You'll never be satisfied with just a radio after hearing this new Atwater Kent Screen-Grid. Two Screen-Grid tubes in some models—three in others. Get the radio that made Screen-Grid famous! It is backed by the name that to millions means most in dependable radio reception. Yet it costs no more—in your choice of many exquisite cabinets. Insist on our Screen-Grid demonstration at your dealer's or in your own home. Today!

RESULTS YOU CAN'T GET WITH OLD STYLE TUBES

Looks Like a Perfect Defense for Motorists

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

That Chicago man who, when ordered to drive on, threw his car into reverse and the two highwaymen to the hard and unfeeling pavement gives us an idea. It was Roger W. Babson, if we remember rightly, who suggested a car to run sideways for convenience of getting in and out of parking spaces. Now if Mr. Babson will improve his car so that it will also run on the bias there will be a perfect weapon to defend motorists against holdups.

If the bandit didn't know of the car's possibilities he could be flopped just by the driver shifting into the right gear, no matter whether the highwayman stood in front, behind, alongside of the car or at an angle from it. If the highwayman did see the danger he would be so embarrassed that he wouldn't dare order his victim to drive on. The result would be that the whole holdup party would have to stay right there until the police came along to ask why it was blocking traffic.

Nationalists Win Another Battle.

NANKING, CHINA, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—The governor of Hunan province said today Hunan forces after severe fighting had disarmed part of Gen. Chang Fah-wei's revolting "Ironsides" division.

Race of Words.

Common Sense Uncommon.

From E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Common sense does not rule in the world, because those who have it are afraid to exercise it. . . . The little sense we all have is common sense—the only kind that proves itself—but there is something in our training that causes us to regard such sense as something to be ashamed of, whereas it is actually a thing to be proud of, if one is able to acquire and exercise a good deal of it. In our ordinary affairs common sense is exercised habitually up to the extent of our powers, but as soon as we deal with large things, somehow we believe we must exercise large ideas with no common sense in them.

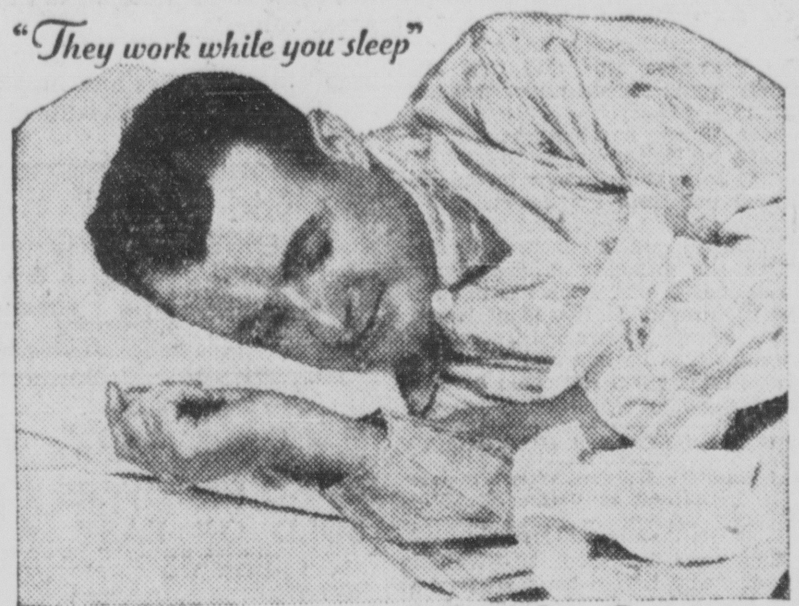
"They work while you sleep"



Cascara is Good for the System

The best thing yet discovered for the purpose is still the little candy Cascaret! Take one whenever the liver and bowels are not functioning as they should.

Cascarets are pleasing to the palate, and pleasant in their action. You eat them just like candy. They work while you sleep. Gentle, but thorough. Cascarets don't stir-up the stomach or upset the system. But they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system clean and sweet; leaves you with an untainted breath, uncoated tongue, and clear head.

Cascarets are made of cascara—long regarded one of the most beneficial laxatives known to medical science. They are sweetened with pure cane sugar and flavored with real licorice. Children love them. So do most grown-ups! Why take anything harsh when constipation threatens? Whenever a dull headache, lassitude, or sick stomach with loss of appetite warns you of poor elimination, a Cascaret or two is the most harmless form of help you could give a lagging system.

Take a candy Cascaret tonight and see how fine you'll feel in the morning—and for days after.

Independence Was Birthplace of Famous Trainer Who Made History in the Sport of Kings—Frank James Was His Betting Commissioner.

THE death of Samuel Clay Hildreth, trainer for the Rancocas stables and one of America's greatest turfmen, stirred the memory of horse lovers here who can remember as far back as 1888 when Hildreth, then a young man of 22, visited a race meeting at Waldo. He brought with him one horse. The meeting broke up at the end of the week and young Hildreth left with his horse.

Although he was born in Independence in 1866, that trip to Waldo was his first here. Nor did he return until 1925, when he stopped here on the way to Los Angeles. While here he visited with Thomas McGee, who was associated with Hildreth when the latter was first beginning his struggle in the sport of kings.

In Hildreth, racing had a man whose skill in conditioning race horses was highly developed. The number of prize winners he trained were numerous. Back in 1910 he had Novelty, which led the field in the classic futurity at Saratoga, besting Whitney's Bashti in a great driving finish.

The greatest of all money makers, Zev, was trained by Mr. Hildreth, but he never considered Zev the greatest horse. It was his opinion both Grey Lag and Purchase were better, although infirmities prevented either from racing to the fame that came to Zev.

Trained Many Famous Horses.

The list of great horses is long. There were Fitz Herbert, McChesney, Novelty, Hourless, Lucullite, Kai-Sang, Strombolo, Friar Rock and Nedana. This year the juvenile Mokatam was the result of the painstaking care Mr. Hildreth took with his charges.

At the age of 14 Mr. Hildreth became a jockey, being paid $6 a month. After about three years of that he became too heavy and so became a trainer. He received $40 a month for these services.

"I didn't get all that money just for training horses—no, sir," Mr. Hildreth said in a magazine article several years ago. "In addition to being trainer I was supposed to be bartender and clerk of the hotel, and if there were any little odd jobs to be done around the place I was supposed to do them and did.

"But I was happy and contented. I began to realize I was accomplishing things in life—getting to the point I had always aimed for. I was a real horse trainer just like my father."

Many-Sided at Seventeen.

Of himself at 17, Mr. Hildreth said, "and here I was at 17, a retired jockey, horse trainer, hotel clerk, bartender and a young buck who had never stopped romping the pastures of Missouri, Kentucky, Kansas and Texas from his weanling days. What did I know besides horses? Nothing. What people I know besides horse people? None. My nursery had been a racing barn; my schoolroom a straw covered stall; my recreation the teaching of leggy colts and fillies and geldings to skedaddle along a narrow prairie lane as fast as their action and courage would take them."

Mr. Hildreth's heart was wound around the sport which brought him honor and he saw always a bright future for it.

"Racing is greater now than it ever was before," he said here in 1925. "Why twenty years ago we thought a $500 purse was something to marvel about. It was big, then. Now there are $50,000 purses, not one, but several in a season. And scarcely a race with the purse less than $1,000.

"Perhaps the horses are no finer now than those twenty years ago but there are more of them. More stables. The infusion of foreign horses has helped greatly. There are more tracks and just as good jockeys."

As a blacksmith Mr. Hildreth made enough money to start a stable of his own. He raced them with success at tracks in New Jersey one season—so successfully, in fact, that the bookmakers became afraid to give reasonable odds on a Hildreth horse. So Mr. Hildreth took unto himself a betting commissioner, who came to him each night and asked him how much he wanted to bet on each race, then bet the money in small amounts and settled with Mr. Hildreth at night.

An Honest Betting Commissioner.

Speaking of the honesty of his betting commissioner, Mr. Hildreth said: "Scrupulous honesty—that's what they call it in business. So when I tell you who my betting commissioner was, bear that fact in mind.

"He was Frank James, one of the famous James brothers, the most daring outlaws the country has ever known; brother of Jesse James. When Frank quit being a desperado he washed the slate clean. He was going straight as a string when I knew him and there were plenty of chances for him to cheat me."

Mr. Hildreth, one of ten children, grew up in a race horse atmosphere. "I honestly think we knew more about horses than we did about people," he said. For years he never knew there was any worthwhile work in the world besides raising horses and teaching them to run as fast as their hearts and legs would carry them.

He and a sister had worked very hard on a tobacco crop. About a week before it was ready a neighbor rode up to his father's stables and challenged him to a match race for a $5,000 side bet. The challenge was promptly accepted and the Hildreth horse, being in poor condition, was beaten.

The Tobacco Crop Was Lost.

Mr. Hildreth's father, who had watched the race calmly, said, "There goes the tobacco crop."

But he paid Sam and his sister $5 each, a sum of money in those days, for the work that they had done in raising tobacco.

That horse racing has changed considerable in the past fifty years was indicated by Mr. Hildreth's description of an old time prairie race in which one of his father's horses, Red Morocco by name, was defeated by a horse named Gray Alice. The trainer wrote a series of articles for the Saturday Evening Post.

"There were about 600 cowboys and ranchers lined up along the course for the start," Mr. Hildreth wrote. "The old ask-and-answer system of starting was the one used in those days for match races like this one.

"One of the owners, when his horse was headed the right way and ready to go, would yell out, 'are you ready?' and if the other horse was in position his owner would say 'go.' If his horse wasn't facing down the track, or if he was too far back from the starting line, he just wouldn't say anything. And they would alternate asking and answering until a start was made.

"Our new jockey got Red Morrocco away to an even start with Gray Alice, and before they had gone far, our horse was two lengths ahead. Then suddenly our horse went over onto the hard turf at the edge of the track and it burned his feet so that he had to slow up, and Gray Alice nosed our horse out.

"Our $5,000 was gone; our hopes blown up. And the worst part of it all was that we had been cheated. The gamblers had got it."

THIEF A DRAFT DODGER

LETTERS TO HARRY I. DOYLE DISCLOSE A TERM IN PRISON.

The Fairmount Man Apparently Had a Mania for Stealing Church Property—Pastor Signs Complaint.

The thieving vagaries of Harry I. Doyle, 35 years old, arrested Friday in his 3-room cottage in Fairmount, were supplemented today with evidences of another vagary. He was identified by William H. Davenport, government secret service operative, as a draft dodger who was sent to Leavenworth prison in the war.

Among the many letters found in the cottage were some from a counterfeiter arrested by Davenport in 1918 in Utah. Through the letters the agent traced Doyle's record at Leavenworth.

When Edison L. Watson, Blue Township constable, went to arrest Doyle at his cottage Friday he had to walk across a 3-foot sidewalk of corrugated iron which surrounded the cottage. Anyone approaching it made noise.

After the arrest, Constable Watson also was told Doyle had a habit of digging mysteriously in his back yard. Perhaps he had buried loot? The constable started a hidden treasure hunt, but before he had shoveled many spadefuls a swarm of bees from a nearby tree was after him. He was stung badly.

The constable also tried to get into the cellar through the only entrance, from outside. A nest of bees under the cellar door drove him away.

Doyle apparently had a mania for church properties, for chalices, incense burners, candles and books stolen from St. Ann's Catholic church at Fairmount were found in the cottage. The Rev. F. E. Biter, pastor of the church, signed a complaint against Doyle, who is in the county jail at Independence in default of $10,000 bond.

A geographical globe stolen from the Mt. Washington school also was in Doyle's cottage. A building contractor found a carpenter's level he had missed. Another man found a drill press and blacksmith's tools. And any number of books and church equipment not identified were in the house.

ACCUSE A KANSAS CITIAN.

Curtis Boyle Faces Mann Act and Forgery Charges.

(By the Associated Press.)

TUCSON, ARIZ., Sept. 26.—Curtis Boyle of Kansas City, under arrest here on a Mann act charge in connection with which Mae Bundy, who recently disappeared and was found wandering in the desert, is held as a material witness, is on the way to San Francisco to answer forgery charges there. Arizona authorities said the Mann act charge would be held open pending the outcome of the San Francisco case, and that Miss Bundy would remain under technical arrest.

Miss Bundy has been kept in seclusion by United States District Attorney John Gung'l since Indians returned her from the desert, with a story that they had found her delirious and nursed her back to health. When she disappeared, Miss Bundy abandoned a car, later identified as the property of E. Rowell of Kansas City. Rowell telegraphed Tucson authorities that he had lent the car to Miss Bundy when she came here for her health.

WALKS IN ON A ROBBERY.

(By the Associated Press.)

RICHMOND, CAL., Sept. 26.—Walking unexpectedly into a bank robbery at the Rodeo branch of the Bank of Pinole, Constable Jerry McDonald opened fire on two bandits, shot one, and was shot twice through the chest. The bandits were said to have escaped with $25,000. Hospital authorities said McDonald probably would die.

Team Work.

"I say! Your ears are extraordinarily long," said the would-be wit.

"Yes, put them on your head and we should have a fine donkey."

What you want in a radio receiver is first of all an instrument whose reproduction of sound is so natural, so full-voiced, that you are transported to the 45-yard line . . . to the fourth row of the parquet circle at the orchestra . . . to the speaker's table at a banquet. You get such reception with the new Eveready Radio.

But since you take the best things in life for granted, you are looking for something more. You want a radio receiver which will be as fine an instrument five, yes even ten, years from now as the day it was placed in your music-room. But the result is interpreted to you in terms of excellence of performance . . . night after night . . . year after year. And that, since you are a person of sense and taste, is what you are looking for.

The Eveready Radio is priced no higher than the ordinary "commercial" receivers on the market. See it. Your eye will show you at a glance the unusual dignity and beauty of the cabinets. Hear it . . . and you will want no other, so clear, even on muggy nights, is the reception. See your nearest dealer at once.

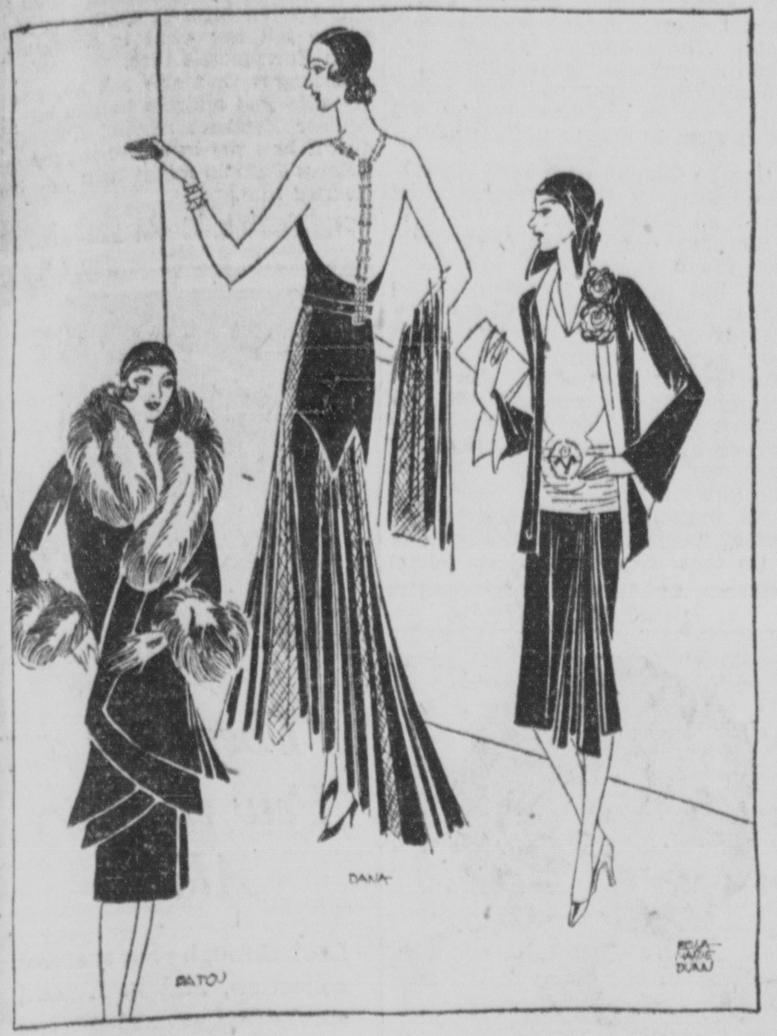
THE 1930 SILHOUETTE WALKS IN BEAUTY.



Three highlights of a downtown fashion opening unfurl their loveliness for feminine eyes. Patou's unerring sense of color and line created the striking red suit with its soft duvetyn finish and voluminous collar and cuffs of gray fox. The blouse worn beneath is of eggshell crepe. The subtly draped hat is developed in red ostrich and felt.

A triumph of grace and sophistication of Irene Dana's interpretation of the princess silhouette in coarse black jersey net with shimmering necklace and girdle of rhinestones. The natural waistline is accented by a slender belt and the hipline swathed. Added movement is given the skirt by the rippling flares that trail the ground in the back. A dainty lace coat accompanies the frock.

Dietitian Suggests Menu, Fruit-Juices and an Ultra-Cleansing Bath

THE enthusiastic class in health led by Mrs. Robert B. H. Bell at the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal church was advised today against constant patter about food.

"Important as is food—and no one should underrate the very essence of life—please regard the subject of such tremendous importance and so intensely personal that you refrain from boring your friends at the bridge table, your guests, the saleslady and the grocer about the subject. Give your whole intelligence to the right choice of food, follow the plan best suited for your own particular case and then forget it, and go ahead with your other interests in life."

The theory is all very fine, and Mrs. Bell gives as the first step toward good health the elimination of all poisons by a 7-day "fruit-fast," and suggests consulting your physician concerning it.

Here are the directions for cleansing the system:

Twelve oranges the first day. Be sure elimination is established. Second day, six grapefruit or more. Third day, drink the juice of six oranges and eat a salad of all the green vegetables you can find on the market, with lemon and salt for dressing. Fourth day, fifteen oranges. Fifth day, eat cooked vegetables for noon and night meals, using oranges for breakfast. Sixth and seventh days, use three lemons between meals, with a dozen oranges at meals. Go slowly. If necessary, just take a little orange juice at a time till you can consume it in large quantities, which will require ten days instead of seven.

It is necessary that one should have natural instead of denatured or demineralized foods, as the latter do not supply the body with the required salts of life. Wheat, for instance, contains sixteen elements, the identical elements of the human body and in the same proportions as the human body.

White flour products are denatured products and are often the cause of improper elimination. This school of health recommends that all who are seeking abundant health use whole grain wheat flour and whole grain products. Use natural sea salt, always. Another denatured food is white or refined sugar. This dietitian suggests the use of unbleached brown sugar, raw sugar, maple sugar or honey. Excessive use of candy made of white sugar causes acidity of the blood. Eat dates and natural sweets for your sugar supply. Encourage the children to eat fruits for their sugar supply by putting a bowl of fruits and nuts on the table at all times.

Vinegar is a denatured product.

In the St. Thomas school of health lemon juice is used for all purposes instead of vinegar.

All highly refined foods, cereals, polished rice, refined oats, potatoes cooked without their skins are doubtful to health. Cook all vegetables with the skins, for under the skin and around the skin is the nourishment. Paprika often may be substituted for pepper.

The following vegetables are rich in the salts necessary to the body: Spinach, celery, lettuce, asparagus, carrots, raw cabbage, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, turnips, cucumbers, tomatoes and radishes.

The following fruits are valuable in the proportion as they appear written below: Limes, lemons, oranges, grapefruit, pears, plums, apples, raspberries, blackberries, gooseberries, strawberries, watermelon, muskmelon and many others.

Foods are divided into three parts: First, the body builders, the protein or nitrogen foods; these are the heavy foods used in the building up of the body—meats, dried beans, eggs, nuts, mushrooms, dried peas, lentils, milk, cheese, legumes.

The second group of foods are the energy foods. They supply the energy of the body and consist of all fruits and vegetables.

The third group of foods are the perpetuating foods. They keep up the heat supply of the body. They are the starches and sweets found in vegetables and fruits. Too many starches and sweets used in proportion to other foods clog the system.

Divide the meal into six parts. Let three parts be supplied by the heavy, protein-bearing foods; two proportions be given to the energy food, fruit and vegetables, and one proportion to sweets and starches. Acid fruits cause trouble when eaten in combination with denatured sweets and starches.

Whole grain wheat, with cream; and
Five rich, unsulphured prunes.
Dripped coffee.

A Model Luncheon.

Fruit or vegetable salad, with dressing made of lemon juice and oil.
Cottage cheese, pressed between some fruit or vegetable, such as prunes, pears, or tomatoes.
One slice of whole wheat bread.
Fresh fruit.
Tea.

A Model Dinner.

Soup.
Broiled steak, with butter and lemon cubes.
Combination salad, with oil and lemon dressing, or mayonnaise made with lemon.
Turnips, carrots, string beans.
Mixed fruits; cheese.
Coffee.

When Mrs. Bell speaks of a cleansing bath she does not mean the usual soap and water procedure that is the daily routine of cleanliness. She thinks of the skin as one of the four great agents for expelling poison from the body and therefore it is necessary to keep the pores open.

This is the bath she suggests for twice a week:

Draw the tub half full of water, put in from one-half to a pound of Epsom salts. Sit in the tub from fifteen minutes to half an hour splashing the water over the entire body and rubbing thoroughly with a sponge. After the bath while the body is still wet rub the entire body with corn meal until the surface of the skin glows. Rinse off the meal in the tub, and dry thoroughly. Now the skin can "breathe."

Mrs. Bell warns her hearers that by this method of cleansing the body many a dainty woman will find to her great surprise that this sort of bath will leave a telltale line of grime on the bathtub, which is simply shocking until one reflects how much better it is to have this on the tub rather than in the pores.

MARCASTLE IS FASHIONABLE.

Is Combined With Jewel Settings in Paris Boudoir Clocks.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Jewelers in Paris have just added another novelty to the list of smart dressing table accessories that have come to be associated with the French boudoir—a little clock that might have come out of an antique treasure chest. It is copied from the old-time boudoir clocks of periods of French elegance, and displays an elaborate border of marcasite and jewels.

There are many stories attached to these little clocks that have just been introduced to Paris—among them the tale that they were first used at times when diamonds were much too precious for anything so utilitarian as a clock, and so displayed marcasite settings to give the effect of gems.

Aside from any historic background, marcasite accessories are fashionable in their own right—so the jewelers report. As often as not they show no jewels, though the smartest of bedroom clocks, boxes and bottles have borders of marcasite combined with small square settings of turquoise, coral, jade and other bright-colored stones.

One of these new boudoir clocks has its oval frame and intricately designed hands made of marcasite combined with garnets and turquoise.

Pepper Relish.

Put through meat chopper, pour boiling water over to cover and let drain ten minutes. Then add:

4 teaspoons salt.

Mix and boil together fifteen minutes. Seal.

Today's Canning Suggestion.

PEPPER HASH.

2 cups sugar.
4 tablespoons salt.
2 quarts vinegar.

Remove seeds from the peppers—do not touch with the fingers. Use a spoon or a dull knife after the peppers have been cut. Run the onions, peppers and cabbage through the food chopper, cover with boiling water, boil ten minutes, and drain. Add remaining ingredients and boil for thirty minutes, or until tender. Fill sterilized jars and seal.

Crisp Desserts From the Oven

IN the fall one begins to think about good baked desserts which come crispy and brown from the oven. For with the first cool days of autumn, the heavier desserts, especially those which are served hot, have a certain relish.

And baked desserts are easy to make. Many are variations of the well-known bread pudding. Brown Betty, for instance, is a scallop of fruit and bread, seasoned with butter, sugar, spices and milk. Although Apple Betty is the best known of the family, other fruits may be substituted for it. Sliced canned peaches or pineapple tid-bits are delicious in this dish, too.

Fruit souffles are fancy enough for the most sophisticated adult, and yet they are good for the children. Fruit pulp of almost any kind may be folded into the beaten egg whites and baked. One of the newest wrinkles is to use, not dried prunes, but canned prunes—the fresh prunes put up in syrup just as is any other fruit.

Indian puddings with their basis of cornmeal may be varied by the addition of fruits, nuts, raisins and special flavorings. And when it comes to cakes and pies, their number is legion.

Here are some delicious oven desserts:

APPLE AND CREAM CHEESE PIE.

Season three cups apple sauce with one-fourth teaspoon of clove, and pour it into a pastry-lined pie tin. Dot with one tablespoon of butter, and bake in an over, 450 degrees F., for ten minutes, then at 350 degrees for twenty minutes. Cool. Beat three-fourths cup of cream and add one cream cheese which has been forced through a sieve. Pile on top of the pie.

PRUNE SOUFFLE.

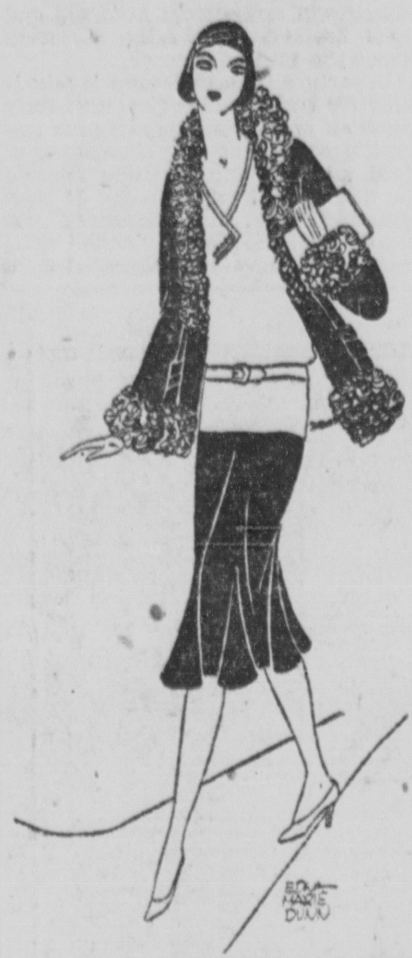
Scald two cups of milk and two cups of water in the top of a double boiler, add one-half cup of cornmeal and stir for five minutes. Let cook five minutes more, then remove and cool slightly. Add one cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon allspice, one-half teaspoon ginger, one-fourth cup butter and two beaten eggs. Add one cup of chopped walnuts, pour into a buttered baking dish and bake uncovered in a slow oven until an inserted knife will come out clean. It should stay 45 to 60 minutes in an oven at 325 degrees. Stir occasionally the first ten minutes to keep the nuts from sinking. Serve hot or cold with cream.

PRUNE SOUFFLE.

Beat four egg whites stiff, and fold in four tablespoons of sugar. Stew fresh prunes, remove stones and cut pulp fine. Fold the pulp into the egg whites. Add one-half teaspoon of almond extract, pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate, 350-degree oven for twenty minutes, or until firm and a delicate brown. Serve at once with a yellow custard poured over it.

Nub tweeds continue to be thoroughly approved for autumn tailored suits and travel coats.

A Broadcloth Suit for Youth.



No variety of autumn suit is more favored than the black broadcloth ones with youthful short jackets trimmed with a flat curly fur. The model sketched introduces black Persian lamb for trimming and a chartreuse blouse of wool crepe in a contrasting color. The small pointed godets at the front of the skirt are coupled with deeper ones at the side to give a flare.

FLASHES OF FASHION.

That the broadcloth hat has entered the ensemble field.

That corsets are again a necessity because of the carefully molded bodice and restrained hips.

Light in color and light in weight woolen ensembles are the choice of many fashionables.

Coarse nets and nets made over flowered taffeta give a new flavor to the mode.

Belts have widened and gained in importance in spite of the publicity accorded princess silhouettes.

The fitted and lengthened silhouette is "going over" in America with skirt lengths modified for day but extreme by night.

Socks have been an important summer fad and are being shown in gay cuffed effects for winter sports and for autumn outdoor activities.

Shaved lamb, goat, caracul of the flatter variety and all flat furs are greatly to the fore as a fall trimming.

Choose Pictures in Same Spirit as Friends

Someone has said of pictures—"They are our silent friends." This is beautifully true, for when one lives with them they do take on quite human qualities. They become lovable, entertaining or soothing just as friends are likely to be. Yet it is strange, when they are such friendly things, that they are so often chosen in a purely conventional way.

A certain wall space seems vacant—and one goes to the art shop for a square of canvas to fill it. It must be so wide and so long—a popular subject, perhaps—and the picture is bought. Too often, after the picture is hung, comes the revelation that it has no real charm either for the room or its habitants.

If the law of natural selection that underlies the making of real friends is applied to the choice of pictures, one does not acquire a stolid, impressive oil portrait because of its fame—when the instinct is all for lighter, more carefree subjects.

If one is an adventurous soul, the picture of barren New England farm life, however fine, will never please. For that individual—the galleon under full sail; the caravan crossing its sea of sand; the knight in his scarlet coat.

If one is a lover of sports and the out of doors, he will find more pleasure in one fine nature picture than in a gallery of priceless etchings of cathedrals and ancient towers—though to the architect the reverse might be true.

Merry subjects that lighten the heart like the laugh of a child; austere productions that by sheer force of their dignity give grandeur to a room; splashing color; restful monotones; fields, mountains, desert sands—for every fancy or purpose there is a picture of true artistic value that will just touch the spot.

With the regulative thought of size and general fitness in the background of the mind, one is free to browse among these treasures of classic and modern art, choosing that which is in closest sympathy with the furnishings of home and his own nature—assured that these silent friends will be conventionally "correct" so long as artistic worth and the simple rules of decorative harmony are observed.

How to Remove Water Stains.

Spots on silk crepe caused by drops of water may be removed by gentle rubbing of the cloth when it dries with a piece of the same material.

Spots of considerable size may be removed from very delicately tinted silks in this way. When there are many spots, they may often be removed by steaming the material. The best way to steam a large garment, such as dress or coat, is to hang the garment in the bathroom, turn on the hot water until the room is steam-filled, and let the garment hang until the room cools. Shaking, brushing and pressing the garment should remove traces of the water marks.

SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON SEEKS EL DORADO IN BLEAK ANTARCTICA

The Explorer Says the World's Last Hoard of Mineral Wealth May Lie Beneath Tons of Ice—Discovery, Captain Scott's Famous Vessel, to Be the Base.

A new and notable expedition of exploration and discovery is now on its way to Antarctica. It is under command of Sir Douglas Mawson, the distinguished Australian scientist and explorer.

Aboard the Discovery, the famous vessel that carried Capt. Robert Scott on his expedition to the Antarctic some years ago, Sir Douglas and his companions will traverse and investigate about 2,000 miles of the coast line of the Antarctic continent hitherto unexplored.

Reports of the progress of the expedition will be transmitted to the outer world by radio from the Discovery and will appear exclusively in The Kansas City Star. In the accompanying article Sir Douglas outlines the scope and purposes of this new adventure into the perilous field of Antarctic research.

By SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON.

(Commander of the British, Australian and New Zealand Antarctic Research Expedition.)

IN these days when most of the continents are so intensely settled and dissected by roads and rail communications, and when man is so much a master of the sea and the air, it seems incongruous that there should exist one continent supporting not one permanent inhabitant, a continent of which even the boundaries are vague and uncertain.

Yet at the southern end of the earth is a great frozen land of continental proportions, exceeding in size the area of Europe. A great silent continent of unblemished white save only along the coast or among the high mountains where the gray rocky pediment occasionally breaks through the ubiquitous capping of ice.

Of all the continents Antarctica is the most modest. Decked in no gay attire, girt only with bare rock and ice, like earth landscapes in the beginning of time, in its modesty it has withdrawn far from the society of other lands. Ringed all around by a broad flowing ocean, she is the proud keeper of great secrets.

Others in the Field.

But in these days of keen search for knowledge not even her remoteness or the ramparts of packed ice can for long stem the strong tide which now threatens to sweep swiftly away the last vestige of secrecy. Already others are in the field and we are about to go forth in an attempt to roll the veil still farther back.

Thanks to the previous expeditions, something is known of the coast line for upwards of 150 degrees of longitude. The land still remains to be outlined through considerably more than half the circumference of the globe in these latitudes. [The expanse to be studied is approximately 2,000 miles long.—Editor's note.]

Though the adventure is somewhat changed by the substitution of greater extremes of natural conditions as an offset to improvements in technique, the great Elizabethan days are again with us when we sail forth for this southern El Dorado, albeit that the lure of treasure in this case is more in the form of scientific riches than of gold itself.

To Explore the Coastline.

With the departure of our ship, the Discovery, on this present expedition, another drama in the pages of Antarctic adventure has commenced. The object is to glean as much knowledge as possible of a large span of the hypothetical coastline of the Antarctic continent and of the coastal waters in the region south of the Indian Ocean and Australia.

There now appears to be no doubt that throughout this region there extends in the neighborhood of the Antarctic Circle the coastline of a continuous land mass.

It is equally certain that it will be found to be a uniformly high, ice-covered land with an interior ice cap rapidly rising to an elevation of over 6,000 feet. And thereafter, more remote from the sea and approaching the pole, still greater plateau elevations are expected to exist.

The Pole a High Plateau.

In the vicinity of the pole itself the plateau was shown by Shackleton, Amundsen and Scott to range in elevation between 10,000 and 11,000 feet above sea level. Isolated peaks are known to be over 13,000 feet high. Antarctica is therefore a land of not only a great area, but of great elevations.

Under the great ice sheet mantling that land fabulous mineral wealth must be hidden. Hidden it is likely to remain unless by chance useful deposits are situated in one of the very limited areas of rocky strata outcropping from beneath the ice.

These mineral stores may in time be made available to posterity by the gradual waning of the ice sheet or by improved geophysical methods of ore detection, when there is great dearth of these elements in the occupied land of today.

Some climatologists believe that the waxing temperature of the present climatic cycle affecting the earth will continue for several thousand years before the pendulum swings the other way. These warming temperatures may go far to melt the Antarctic ice cap, and thus within a span of time less than that covered by the historical period of Egyptian civilization, the mineral wealth of Antarctica may be made available.

Fisheries a Possibility.

Such prospects as these do not influence us in this present adventure. The only economic aspect that immediately appeals is that of the fisheries, and this is of high importance.

The great encircling ocean is as well stocked with life as are the seas of lower altitudes. On this account preparations have been going forward during the last four months for investigation into marine life.

THE DISCOVERY, IN WHICH SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON SET SAIL THE OTHER DAY ON AN EXPEDITION TO THE ANTARCTIC. THE FAMOUS VESSEL, WHICH WAS BUILT IN 1920 FOR CAPTAIN SCOTT, IS SHOWN SAILING DOWN THE THAMES AT THE START OF HER PRESENT VOYAGE. SIR DOUGLAS IS SHOWN IN THE INSET.

The cost of the expedition is being defrayed largely from private sources. Leading Australian citizens have subscribed considerable sums. But the well-being of the expedition is primarily owing to the princely gift of £10,000 (about $50,000) toward the general expenses provided by Mr. Macpherson Robertson, one of Australia's leading philanthropists.

Considerable assistance toward the cost of the enterprise has also been forthcoming from the British, Australian and New Zealand governments—hence the designation B. A. N. Z. Antarctic Research Exchange.

Sailed the Frist of August.

According to plan, on the first of August the vessel sailed from London under command of Captain Davis, en route for Capetown, where most members of the scientific staff and myself will arrive from Australia and New Zealand to join the Discovery about the 12th of October.

Departure from Capetown is scheduled for October 15, when, with forty souls on board, and an extensive scientific equipment and abundance of food and clothing carefully selected for the special requirements of such exacting work, the Discovery will head for Kerguelen Island. This run, which may be punctuated by a call at the Crozet Islands, is expected to take about three weeks.

At Royal Sound, on Kerguelen Island, a stay of about a week will be made. From Kerguelen, laden with every ton of coal found possible to accommodate, we sail south to Heard Island, a voyage of only a few days' duration. There, in latitude 53 degrees 10 minutes south and longitude 73 degrees 35 minutes east, the real work of the expedition will begin.

We shall proceed southeast from Heard Island, and hope to reach the sixtieth degree of south latitude by the end of November.

Ice may or may not have been encountered prior to reaching this point, but henceforth for several months our investigations will be conducted daily among the ice floes.

We shall go south through the pack-ice to the coast, if the passage can be made. If not, the vessel will continue to push east and west through the ice-strewn waters over a considerable arc of longitude, making scientific observations regularly at a series of stations.

Whether actual land is reached, it is certain that the echo-sounding equipment will furnish an abundance of information regarding the sea floor and the location of the continental shelf. Thus knowledge should henceforth be much more definite regarding the outline of the Antarctic continent in that region.

The geographic work should be greatly assisted by the small scout airplane which is part of the equipment. Though the plane is not intended to make long flights, yet it should be invaluable as a scout to ascertain the distribution of the pack-ice and thus assist the navigation of the ship. For this purpose it has been fitted with floats so that it may rise from the water beside the vessel.

Should the Discovery reach islands or the mainland of Antartica, as is almost certain to happen in one or two places at least, the coast will be surveyed and a party landed to investigate the geological and biological features.

Ship to Be the Base.

There is no present intention, however, to put ashore a permanent land party to winter in Antartica. The ship is to be the base and any parties temporarily landed will be taken on again after delay of a few days at the most.

By operating in this way it is anticipated that, in the time available, the broad scientific features can be ascertained over a wider area than by other methods of attack.

With the advent of autumn, the ship is to be extricated from the ice, and a course set for civilization, arriving no doubt in Australia some time in April, 1930. If, on the other hand, it be found impossible to release the ship from the grip of the ice, then we must look forward to at least one winter frozen in at the mercy of the grinding floes.

But this will have no terrors for us, for the wonderfully strong frame of the Discovery will be a tough nut to crack. Further, for this emergency we are amply provided in the matter of food, sledges, and fur and wool clothing.

LON CHANEY STANDS PAT

WITH CHAPLIN, HE STILL REFUSES TO MAKE TALKIES.

But, Unlike Charlie, He Is in No Position to Dictate, as He Is Only an Actor on a Salary.

By MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., Sept. 26.—Lon Chaney, recuperating from an operation for removal of his tonsils, still has not solved his difficulties with the motion picture industry.

Chaney will not "go talkie." And the producers of this village have invested their millions in audible films. The professional circle has only two loyal adherents to the old-fashioned silent film. Charlie Chaplin and Lon Chaney have steadfastly refused to "talk" in their film appearances.

For Chaplin, sticking to his theory has been an easy, if somewhat expensive, matter. King of comedy, all Charlie Chaplin had to do when the issue became vital was to resign from United Artists and go in for independent production of silent films.

Lon Chaney is not an independent producer. He is an actor, under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. And that studio is an "all audible" concern. Even Greta Garbo talks in her forthcoming production.

For a time it looked as if Lon Chaney's career were coming to a sudden close. His friends talked of failing health—of serious illness requiring instant rest and change. Off he went to Sobobo Hot Springs, and on went the picture for which he had been scheduled, with a substitute actor—chosen by Lon Chaney.

From a distance the war against talkies was waged. Lon Chaney insisted on a silent version for his return, and the studio was adamant in its insistence upon a talkie.

And from high places drifts the rumor that Chaney, favorite of all the universe, young and old, rich and poor, men and women, is not in as high esteem with the powers that be as he might have been had he not been so faithful to his ideas and his ideals.

The matter will be patched up. Chaney is too valuable a box office attraction to be dropped from the lists. But he may have to meet his producers' ideas of the change in artistic standards if he still wants to keep in the foreground of gelatine interest.

Those who oppose film moguls do not prosper in the colony. Jetta Goudal had some ideas of what a lady of temperament should be allowed to do. So firmly were they intrenched that she took them to court, where a jury of twelve tried men and true stood by her. But she hasn't been bothered by any engagements since. The colony is "all for one" when it comes to "insubordination."

Lon Chaney may stall for time—but it will be a definite cut of the cards when he returns to the studio.

Charlie Chaplin once more capitalizes pathos as the wellspring from which all humor flows.

His story—that of the funny little man whom we have come to identify with the Chaplin personality, who makes a tremendous sacrifice that a little blind girl who loves him madly may have the operation which will give her back her sight. Her sight returned, Chaplin comes for the first interview with his beloved. Approaches her house only to hear her say from the front porch, "Oh, see the funny little man!"

He walks on down the street—on out of the picture—out of life itself.

Do that with talk and see where you'll get. It doesn't need conversation to put it over.

My most embarrassing moment comes when Miss T. Simpamen asks me to tell her what is wrong with John Barrymore's face.

I suggest that she ask the gentle himself—just address him in care of Warner Brothers Studio, Hollywood. And if he's shy in answering perhaps Dolores Costello might help out. She married him.

"My Skin Nearly Drove Me Mad"

"I had pimples and blackheads so badly, and used to squeeze them so much that my face looked red and raw. On the advice of a nurse friend I got a jar of Rowles Mentho Sulphur and used it faithfully for ten days. In 3 days' time there was a big difference in my skin and today it is as soft and clear as my 10-year-old sister's."

The sulphur in Rowles Mentho Sulphur clears the skin, while the Menthol heals the sore, broken tissue. That's the twofold action you want for skin troubles. Try Rowles Mentho Sulphur not only for pimples and blackheads, but for dry, scaly skin, rash, and itching eczema. IT WORKS! All druggists sell it in jars ready to use. Be sure it's Rowles.

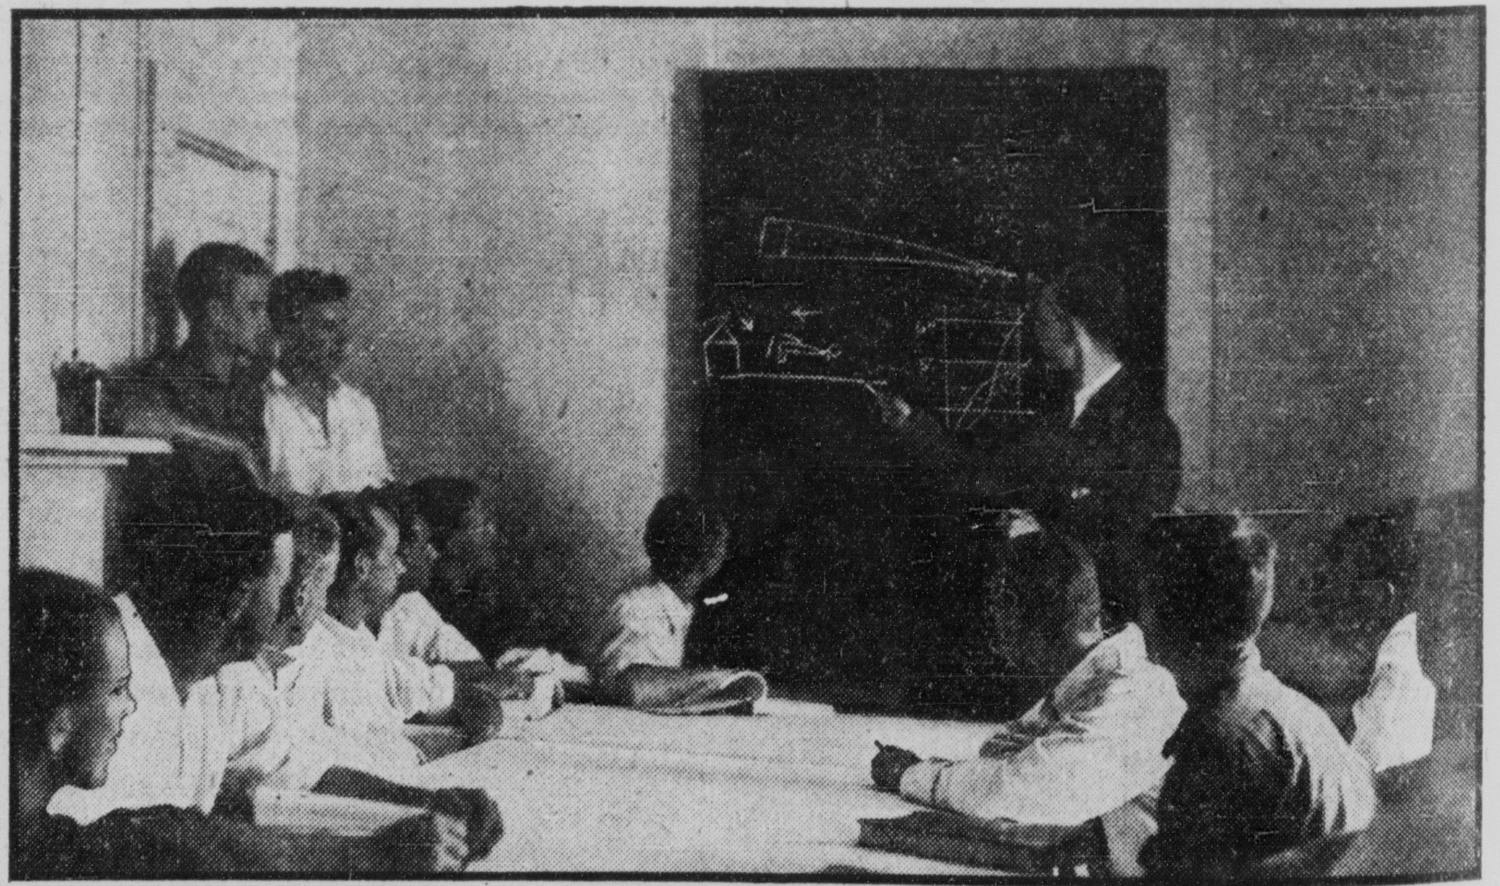
Where is YOUR place in AVIATION?

Business Man, Clubwoman, Sportsman, Mechanic, Prospective Pilot . . .
This new $50 course in fundamentals makes sure you get started RIGHT!



"The local office of the Curtiss Flying Service will soon open classes in a special Fall term of its new ground school course, designed to give a sound knowledge of fundamentals in a manner that is equally useful to business man, the woman who hopes to fly, and the youth embarking on a pilot's or mechanic's career."

—LOCAL NEWS ITEM

WHAT does flying mean to you? Romance? Adventure? Association with the new thing?

What does aviation offer you? A future? A chance for profit? Ways to speed up your business?

What place do you expect to fill? That of sportsman pilot? Professional pilot? Mechanic . . . designer . . . engineer? Executive in any one of the countless phases of aviation as a business?

No matter what your interest in aviation . . . no matter in what way it appeals to you . . . even if it is only something in which you, as a well-informed person, should be interested . . . the new Curtiss ground school course is an opportunity you should not overlook.

For this course gives you the best approach to aviation you can possibly find.

It shows you why airplanes fly . . . and what the differences are between various kinds of ships. It demonstrates, simply, how a pilot controls his plane, and how he finds his way through night and fog.

It deals with engines . . . their types, their differences, their operation and care. It shows plane construction . . . parts, assembly, methods of control. It touches on meteorology . . . the weather, its effects, how it is mastered.

And it covers the commercial and social aspects of flying. The demand for pilots. Costs of plane operation. The personal plane and the business plane. Flying today and flying tomorrow.

In short . . . your place in aviation and how you attain it.

The course takes the form of 24 classroom lectures, delivered by specially trained instructors who have demonstrated their ability, both as fliers and as teachers. Actual engines, propellers, instrument boards, wing sections, etc., make the course graphic. Model planes show how various types of planes behave in the air, and maps, charts and drawings give visual illustrations of the topics under discussion.

And, finally . . . should you take up any Curtiss Flying Course after successfully completing ground school the tuition you now pay . . . $50 . . . is automatically deducted from the cost of such course.

CLASSES ARE NOW FORMING. Get the full facts and talk things over with your family. Mail the coupon today. Or better yet, phone the Curtiss Manager for an appointment.

Woman Makes 'A Success of Street Cleaner

A troubled conscience led Ava L. Parrott Carey to success. And as a result of her inability to see 150 stockholders in a company organized by her husband lose their investments, she is today at the head of the Parrott Dry Process Street Cleaning Company. The company offers no street cleaners for sale, writes V. A. Maura in the Brooklyn Eagle. Instead it is paid so much per mile for the streets it cleans, thus eliminating all chance of dishonesty and graft. The machine is the invention of Mrs. Carey's father and how she came to take up the proposition after having thrown the letter into a bureau drawer is an interesting story in itself.

WHEN Ava L. Parrott Carey, in a fit of temper, flung an unopened letter into a bureau drawer she almost threw away her one big business chance.

A year later, her anger cooled, she slit the envelope and read its contents. The opening of the letter marked the beginning of her career as president of the Parrott Dry Process Cleaning Company.

Ava Carey had quarreled with her father, J. W. Parrott, tempermental inventor. When he wrote to her she refused to open his letter and tossed it away. When finally she did read it she found that he had inclosed drawings of his latest invention, a dry street cleaner, and an invitation to carry on his work which he, because of illness, could no longer accomplish. Touched by the incident, a reconciliation was quickly effected, and then and there she became the president of the company.

NOW A SUCCESS.

That was several years ago. Today Mrs. Carey has perfected the cleaner to such an extent that she is demonstrating it before city commissioners and councilmen all over the country.

Ava Carey is a tiny woman with a dynamic personality. She has the spirit of a fighter, but she fights always in the cause of what she would call righteousness. As a teacher some years ago she argued at Albany for pensions and salary increases.

She absolutely refuses to sell her machine. She rents it out to cities on a mileage basis, because she fears that, sold outright, it might open opportunities for the petty grafting type of politician.

It is partly because her conscience troubled her and partly because she is so determined that Mrs. Carey has made her business a success.

"Three years ago my husband, who was in the business with me, died," she says, "and as we had 150 stockholders I felt I had to carry on—my New England conscience, I suppose. But I had so little money. There were only a few hundred dollars in the treasury. I was faced with the necessity of raising $55,000 if I wanted to make the business go. And I did, more than I have ever wanted anything in all my life."

SUBSCRIBED BY TEACHERS.

Mrs. Carey got her money in a short time, subscribed for the greater part by grateful teachers whose cause she had fought.

It was determination that really helped her to get the subscriptions. "The day I was speaking before a meeting of fourteen big business men in my effort to put my company on a sound financial basis," she says, "a multimillionaire in the audience shrugged his shoulders and remarked, 'She'll never get even $10,000.' I decided then and there I would show that man. I did. I got the $55,000. Only a few months ago I was demonstrating my sweeper on Fifth avenue before city officials and others, who applauded me, right under the apartment windows of that man. I had not only raised the money but I had made my sweeper a go."

The woman president of this company is proud of its 4,500 members and of its success. But most of all, she is proud of the way her sweeper has been put on the market, "without buying and selling, without opportunities for graft."

"We are merely paid so much per mile for the distance swept," she explains. "This is all very exact. An adometer is attached to the shaft of the broom which registers the distance cleaned. If the broom is not touching the street it does not register.

NO CHANCE FOR GRAFT.

"We take entire charge of the upkeep. We have our own operator on the machine, which is attached to the city tractor, carrying its own driver. It is under our own control. As there is no buying, no selling, there can never be an incentive to grafting."

Mrs. Carey is emphatic in her statement that business is now, and forever will be, her particular field. She will never go back to teaching.

His Star Turn.

From Answers, London.

It was a long time since Mrs. White and Mrs. Green had met.

"You weren't even engaged when I last saw you," said Mrs. White. "What does your husband do for a living?"

Her friend looked most impressed.

Mrs. Green hesitated.

"Well, he doesn't exactly take parts," she said. "He just tells the people whether it's a case of 'standing room only' or not."

* * *

"Do you want alimony, madam?"

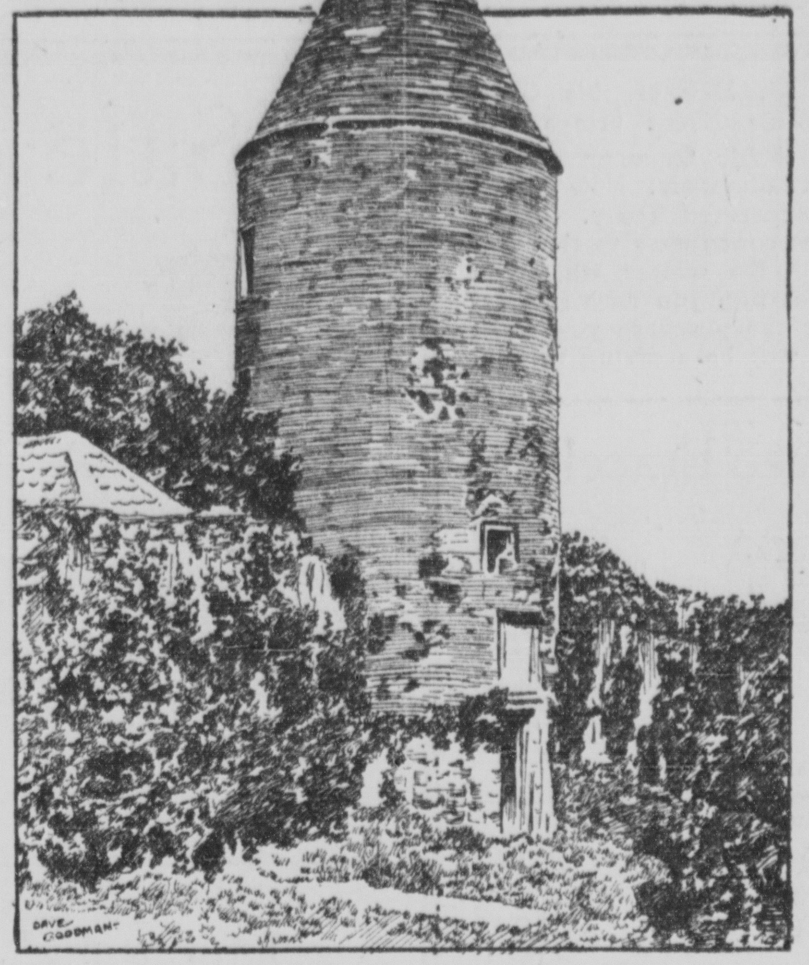
LARGO TOWER, WHERE SCOTLAND'S WIDOWED QUEENS LIVED



In the olden days the widowed queens of Scotland dwelt in Largo, in a tower castle still standing. Largo also is notable as the birthplace of Alexander Selkirk, prototype of "Robinson Crusoe."

Failure.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

Up here in the North the spring came late,
And my gardener tells me he had to wait
And made the bed for my zinnia seeds.

It is later now, and along the wall
Struggling to master a bloomless fate
But it's all in vain. They began too late.

The frosts will come in a week or two
And nip the buds which are breaking through,
And these thin, frail plants will meet their doom;
For their day has passed, and they'll never bloom.

There are men and women whose common fate
Seems never to bloom, though the urge is great.
In a world of glory their lives are cast
But chance held them back till their day had passed.

TRIUMPH OF THE HAIRPIN.

Immigrant Girl Comes to Rescue of a Broken Down Cart.

From the New York Sun.

"Even the hairpin is returning," says a Paris fashion note. It came back to New York recently in one of its many useful roles through a traffic breakdown in City Hall Park right under the window of Mayor Walker's office. While 5-year-old Danny Miller from the lower East Side was treating his 3-year-old sister, Gwendoline, to a seeing Civic Virtue trip the carriage he was pushing suddenly stopped, the wheel rolling away like a hoop, the axle dropping to the pavement, leaving his sister hanging perilously on the drooping side gazing down on a hard cement walk. The boy's look of dismay and helplessness had in it more woe than a grownup could muster if all his tires had burst on a lonely country road.

The wheel that rolled away stopped between the legs of a lawyer bound for the federal court. He picked it up and put it on the axle. The pin which had held the wheel in place, however, was missing. The lawyer searched vainly for it, as did also the "benchers" and men passing along the walk. Had anyone a nail? No. Had anyone a match? Yes, plenty of paper matches but not one old-fashioned wood match. "What you need is a hairpin," said a man of the crowd who had lived before the war and knew the versatility of its potentialities. The only woman around was an immigrant girl, freshly arrived and still carrying her luggage. She did not know a word of English and could not understand what was wanted. Two girls passed; they said that they had not used a hairpin in five years. As proof they ran their fingers through their hair. Something in this gesture of helplessness impressed the immigrant girl. She took from her hair a sturdy, old-fashioned wire hairpin. The lawyer dropped it into the hole in the axle. It held the wheel firmly in place.

The lawyer went on to court. The boy dried his tears. Gwendoline rode away waving her chubby hand. The hairpin may return in another role, but in that of the indispensable, universal tool in all mechanical emergencies it has once more asserted its pre-eminence.

John and Florence Getting a Look Into Domestic Economy

ONE might naturally suppose the ideal marriage is one that goes off without a hitch, but paradoxically enough it seems the young folks will marry, and on a salary that makes one wonder what the little lady is going to use to buy silk stockings.

Nevertheless, Florence says she is going to live within his income, which is to say that she might be able to live better without it, if she would let herself draw on other resources. John is paying twice as much as his pa for his apartment, but as it really isn't any better than his pa's, that gives them an even break—or, if it isn't even, maybe pa can make up the difference. And really there is nothing wrong with apartments in America except that a $40 apartment costs $80. And on the honeymoon it is found that the difference between a $7 and a $5 hotel room is an extra bar of soap.

It seems that the young folks will marry.

With a car that can get ten evaporated gallons to the mile, the young couple could avoid railroad fare and Pullman—and when they get home they could use it to troll for sardines among the delicatessen stores and save the expense of a gas range.

AMONG HOME FOLKS.

By honeymooning through Northampton and on grandpap's farm in Vermont and otherwise visiting with relatives there is some saving on hotel bills. And by finding out there is such a thing as an oil lamp and a water barrel under the spout, there could be an idea for saving in electric light and water bills. And, too, Vermont is the home of the sunbonnet, and Florence might try one on. When a Vermont sunbonnet gets to going good the lesson in home economics is impressive. In Vermont a young husband can buy his bride a 10-cent sunbonnet and she can wear it in the garden and hennery and give him a $400 return on his investment.

But instead of taking up the sunbonnet idea, Florence, woman-like, is likely to show an interest in canning fruit, which is all right in Vermont, but is very expensive in a city apartment. After spending $21.68 for fruit jars, rubber rings and paraffin, and $14.78 for fruit and $17.85 for sugar and other incidentals, it is found that there is almost as much fruit as $11.80 will buy at the grocery store, and which is crowding the kitchenette so much that the couple has to go to using condensed milk. Also some kettles which hubby has to scrape out and a blister on an index finger which he has to kiss and make well.

And there are other realities which have to be met.

MEETING THE REALITIES.

And there are other realities which have to be met—not the least of which may be the great lack of dough of the proper sort around the cottage. And Florence may discover that John, nice young man that he is, can snore just as blatantly as her papa.

But a helpful attitude—and the actual help that should go with it—is the stanch galleon which rides out the disillusionments. By dividing the little tasks incidental to realities, there arise those spiritual joys of the wedded life.

For instance, Florence can take upon herself the duty of making the toast. It is a pretty, housewifely task, expressing as it does the yearning of the mistress of the home to impart that last touch of excellence to something that is fairly good in the first place. It is the graceful gesture of the good wife who loves her husband and expresses her good intentions by preparing toast for him.

JAPAN HONORS A SAILOR.

Monument Erected in Memory of Will Adams, Englishman.

In 1926 the tercentenary of the death of Will Adams, the Japanese government erected in Tokio a statue to this national hero, who died lord high baron pilot of Japan. Adams, an Englishman, was Drake's storekeeper when the Spanish armada was destroyed, but, being of a religious turn of mind, he objected to the piratical ways of the great captain and went into seagoing business on his own account.

He set sail for the Far East as master pilot of five ships and landed on the shores of Japan in 1600, with one ship, in which there were left only five starving men who were able to stand. Adams and his companions were brought before the great Tokugawa Shogun, who took a fancy to the Elizabethan captain and asked him to build a ship for the imperial navy. This he did with such success that he mounted into high favor with the emperor.

Witty Kitty.

and the famous "Cold Control" that makes desserts better and ice cubes quicker

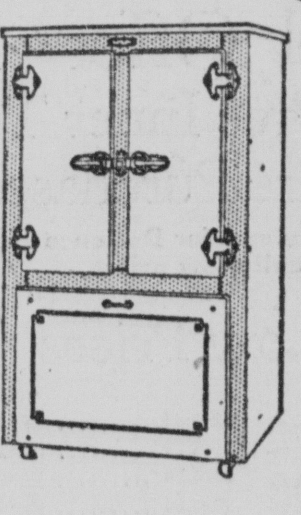
FRIGIDAIRE has a surplus of power. Even when the thermometer climbs high in the nineties there is power to spare for emergencies. By its position in the cabinet the powerful Frigidaire mechanism is made still more efficient. It is enclosed in a special compartment at the bottom . . . where surrounding air is the coolest. It is out of sight and out of the way, with nothing to catch dust or dirt.

Frigidaire maintains a low, uniform temperature in the food compartment without attention. And in the dessert and ice-making compartment it is also regulated automatically. But if you want extra-quick freezing temperatures you can have them . . . whenever you wish . . . by simply turning the lever of the Frigidaire "Cold Control."

The "Cold Control" gives you your choice of six different freezing speeds. It enables you to freeze an abundance of ice cubes and desserts easily and quickly. The Frigidaire "Cold Control" is found on no other electric refrigerator.



The Frigidaire "Cold Control" has introduced a new standard in electric refrigeration. It is as important as a gas regulator on an oven.

Save by painting now with SWP

SWP costs less than ONE CENT a square foot—2 coats

It means a real saving to give your house an armor-like coating of SWP this fall. Even if the cost of doing it were twice as much, you still would be money ahead to paint now instead of waiting until spring.

There is nothing human about winter. It neglects nothing. Houses, garages, fences, shutters, flower boxes—anything exposed to it must have a tough film of the best paint to avoid costly damage.

It costs less to paint your house with SWP House Paint—now or at any other time. This is because SWP has such wonderful body and amazing covering quality.

Fewer gallons of SWP are required because each gallon thoroughly covers more square feet of surface. Therefore SWP costs less on your home.

And think of how much you save on repainting. SWP with its rich, weatherproof colors and its tough paint film lasts 5 years, on the average—retaining its beauty and quality look to the very last. Cheaper paint must be repainted in a year, or, at best, two years' time. SWP often cuts repainting costs 50% to 75%. And its true, lasting colors give a new value to your home for years to come.

At "Paint Headquarters" near you, you can see for yourself how much you can save on painting costs. Here, too, you can consult the big S-W Decorative Book showing many beautiful new color schemes. This aid is yours without cost—merely for the asking.

Little Stories for Bedtime

The Shadow-Children Seek Facts About the Chameleon

Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf — the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—were in the library one evening when they noticed the Natural History book. It was open at a picture of a little garden in a tropical land. It was tropical, they were sure, because they could make out palm trees and oddly-shaped red, blue and white flowers.

Underneath the picture was the word "Chameleon."

"What's that?" Yam wanted to know.

"It might be the name of the man who owns the garden," Flor suggested.

"Or the name of the country where the garden is," Mij said.

"No," Knarf said, shaking his head wisely, "it's the name of an animal that looks something like a camel, except that it's really 'chamel.' And the 'leon' is its first name, except that it comes last."

"WE CAN'T SEE IT."

Hanid, however, didn't agree with him.

"A chameleon," she said, pronouncing kam-eel-yon, "isn't like a camel and its first name isn't Leon. It's simply a little lizard."

She was a very clever little shadow-girl, you see, who always knew what she was talking about, and what was even more important, only talked about what she knew. She wasn't at all like Knarf, who rarely knew what he was talking about and more rarely talked about what he knew.

"Humph," Knarf remarked, peering closely at the picture, "I don't see any lizard, or chameleon, as you call it. I don't think it's there. It's not like my 'chamel,' which can be plainly seen."

"Plainly seen!" exclaimed the others. "Why, we can't see it anywhere!"

"It's right behind that thick bush," the cunning shadow-boy retorted. "All you have to do is look behind the bush and you'll see it as plain as day."

As a matter of fact, Hanid's chameleon could be seen no more plainly than Knarf's curious "chamel." Yet she was quite sure it was there, somewhere.

They all looked and looked. Knarf looked for his chamel, Hanid for her chameleon and the others for both. Of course, one or the other must be in the picture. It wasn't simply a picture of a garden—no, that could not be. Pictures of gardens aren't found in natural history books.

Just then Knarf exclaimed: "I'm going to look behind the bush!" Hardly had he said this than he gave a spring and—presto! do you know where he was? He was inside the picture!

He motioned to the others. "Come in, come in!" he called. Then they gave a spring, too, and—presto! they found themselves in a beautiful garden, fragrant and warm.

But where was the chameleon, or the chamel?—that was the question.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA WIDELY APART IN MANNERS OF LIVING

The Star's Roving Correspondent Finds Great Britain a Nation of Leisure Loving and Deliberate People, Yet Painstakingly Thorough in the Things They Do.

The Stars' Roving Correspondent, Edwin G. Pinkham, has returned from his European tour, and herewith presents a comparison of English and American life.

I HAVE been asked to compare American and English life and to say which race gets the most out of it. This being, in the absence of any common standards, an impossible task, I cheerfully undertake it, but warn you the conclusions must be your own—and that they will be those you already have formed. For myself, I am neutral in this matter and therefore have no voice. I have learned from English discussions of the naval controversy that neutrals have no rights.

The first step should be to find out what the English think about American civilization and what Americans think of the English brand. This will not be difficult. The English view of us is sufficiently illustrated by a story told with much glee in England.

Admiration and Respect.

"This," explained a proud American who was pointing out the sights of New York to an Englishman as their ship steamed into the harbor, "is the Statue of Liberty."

The Englishman gazed with admiration.

"Ah," he said, "very fine indeed. I'm glad to see you doing this sort of thing. In England we, too, raise memorials to our glorious dead."

"Well, I wouldn't worry about that now," counseled the American kindly, "it will soon fall down and then you can build a new one."

These stories reveal the fact we must get at and recognize when we try to compare the American and English theories of life, and that fact is that neither country understands what it is the other is trying to do. When we recognize this fact fully we will cease trying to make comparisons. Instead, we will draw contrasts.

These opposite views of life, too, ought to dispose of the too much dwelt upon fact that America and England speak a common language. They don't. Language regarded as a vehicle for the expression of ideas cannot be common where the ideas expressed are not common. American and English ideas are not common. The races have different objectives. The American replaces the old with the new as fast as he can. The Englishman preserves the old as long as he can. Each gets what he regards as the most desirable results out of these opposite processes.

Hinges on a Definition.

It is true, of course, that standards of living greatly differ in the two countries, but who is to say which is the higher? It depends upon what you mean by higher and perhaps on what you pay to get it. The Englishman grows his own flowers. The American, when he wants flowers, buys them at the florist shop. Here, I think, the English illustrate a theory of living the American has not contemplated. The American's idea centers upon the objective of getting the flowers. The quickest way he knows is to get them by telephone. But the Englishman's notion of possession embraces a less simple philosophy. His desire is not possessive alone but creative. He would not buy anything he could make himself even if he had the price. What he has wrought himself is doubly his and immeasurably enhances his sense of possession. An American family in London this summer had projected a trip into the country, and had figured out costs and train schedules pretty much to their satisfaction when an English acquaintance called upon them at their hotel. To him the Americans pridefully exhibited the result of their labors and obviously expected his approval. He did not approve at all.

"Anybody could do it that way," he said. "You have made it just a matter of spending the money and getting the result with the least effort of your own. You will find no satisfaction in that—at least I wouldn't. I will show you how you can do the same thing at half the cost and get much more pleasure out of it."

With that he took pencil and paper, revised their whole travel schedule, figured all costs, accounted for every hour required for the trip and the activities of each, and produced a budget that was indeed less than half the Americans had estimated.

"That," said the Englishman, "is the way I should do it. In that way I should make the trip my own and not the railroad company's. That is where I would get my pleasure out of it. Anybody can throw money about."

If we keep viewpoints in mind then we shall see how meaningless mere comparisons between American and English ways of living become. What we must compare are objectives. What is it the Englishman is trying to do with his life? What the American?

Plumbing as a Burden.

The American in England is too likely to think the English are weak on plumbing because they don't know about plumbing. That is not so. The English know all about plumbing, and the reason they don't have it is because they don't want it. They regard plumbing and telephones and central heating as useless burdens, an unnecessary overhead that complicates life and makes harder and more costly the attainment of its proper ends. The American has so many conveniences in living to take care of that, in the Englishman's view, he has no time to live. The Englishman, for example, though he uses a telephone for business purposes in his office, never has regarded that invention as an agency whereby his business is enabled to follow him to his home. He would regard that use of it not as a convenience but as an annoyance. He doesn't want his business to follow him to his home.

An American Discoverer.

An American who didn't know about that has told me how he discovered his error. His firm, which uses a certain English made machine, world famous for its precision in operation, had sent him to England to hurry delivery on one of them. His travel schedule had been carefully figured. It allowed him two days to transact his business with the head of the English firm and catch a certain boat back. But the American arrived in London on a bank holiday and the Englishman's place of business was closed. He was at his country home forty miles from London. The American dashed for a train and reached the place while the sun was still high. Plenty of time to transact a lot of business. But the Englishman wasn't at home. He was attending a cricket match between the Surrey Blues and the Sussex White Sox, or something like that. The American dashed for the scene of this utter foolishness, broke through a whole countryside of spectators and charged down upon the English manufacturer, where he was just taking what Dick Swiveller called a modest quencher of ginger beer. To his astonished gaze the American produced his papers and began to explain his mission, laying considerable stress upon its importance.

"This," interrupted the Englishman, "is a bank holiday. It will be a bank holiday until next Monday morning at 10 o'clock. At that time I will take up this business with you at my office in London. In the meantime you are my guest. Have some ginger beer, and allow me to explain to you the status of the present match between the Surrey Blues and the Sussex White Sox."

Nor did the American's protests avail. He remained three days at the Englishman's country place and had much conversation and tea, but the conversation was not about machinery. Not until 10 o'clock Monday morning when they had reached the London office did the Englishman ask the American what the business was he wished to talk about.

There is still another point involved in the result of the American's mission. The machine he was after had been completed and inspected about fourteen times, but the Englishman wouldn't deliver it until it had passed a final inspection.

"I'll take it without the last inspection," promptly decided the American.

"Oh, no," said the Englishman. "We are responsible for the perfection of the machine. It has to pass a certain number of inspections before we can take that responsibility."

The Guarantee on a Name.

"We'll relieve you of the responsibility. We'll give you a written release."

"Oh, no. The machine bears our name. That is the guarantee that it is up to our standard. We cannot let it go out bearing our name until all our inspection standards have been met."

"We'll take your name off of it."

"Oh, no. We could not allow that."

There you have another English standard. I am not sure you wouldn't find the same standards in other English craftsmanship—say in the making of books. I was about to write down here the names of half a dozen contemporary English writers and ask you to match them with half a dozen contemporary American writers of your own choice, in point of thoroughgoing, painstaking literary craftsmanship. But I don't do it because I find the list swelling to a dozen, and that would require you to extend your American list to a dozen. I don't want to make it any harder for you than necessary.

The Englishman being content then with his way of living, and satisfied that his civilization is superior to any other in the world, does not even object very much when he is compelled to run down the middle of the street to catch his bus. London busses are a convenient method of transportation, for short distances, if you know where they stop. No Londoner knows. No Londoner ever will find out because they never stop twice in the same place. They go until the traffic stops them. If you could know where a traffic jam is to occur you could go there and get on a bus, although it probably wouldn't be the one you wanted. Englishmen who like to assert, especially to Americans, that they are a free people and will stand no nonsense from public servants never yet have risen in arms, called out the train bands and demolished a bus. They always have been accustomed to running after busses and boarding them while they are trying to get away, and what Englishmen have been accustomed to doing they continue to do. But the busses are an expensive method of transportation anyway, as you have to spend the day with them to get anywhere. Only the wealthy can afford to spend their days that way. The busses are for the dukes therefore. The poor have to ride in taxies.

An English Toleration.

For the same reason that discomforts, inconveniences, annoyances and exasperations are English and therefore sacred, Englishmen tolerate and even extol their hotels and trains. They are not good, according to American standards, but, then, you must remember the English do not consider American standards good.

The English hotels—and I speak now of the less expensive London hotels and not of country inns or certain railroad hotels in the provinces, which are in a class apart—seem to go to more trouble to be not good than it would take to be really good. This is true always where hotels once good in the English way—that is, quiet, private and easeful like Falstaff's inn—have been "modernized." In such cases they are neither modern nor good. They have become un-English without becoming American. The little wooden coaches that the little iron engines whirl along at such speed on the English railways would not be allowed in service in America. But though the English complain some (to each other) about their trains, they do not want American trains. The most they want is more and newer little wooden coaches. They scoff at steel coaches as being necessary only in a country where trains are frequently piled up in wrecks. Their little wooden coaches, they say, are never so piled up. This is not strictly true.

Speedy, Safe and on Time.

But it is true that their trains, whose longest runs are short compared to ours and which have few heavy grades to make and almost no grade crossings, are speedy, usually safe and almost always on time. But they are often scandalously crowded, piled with luggage, which must be climbed over, and quite without what Americans call service. I speak now of third class, which is the class by which most Englishmen travel. First class is for the dukes (who are broke anyway and so can spend freely), American butter and egg men and hunting dogs.

But these are minor characteristics of English life, details that go to make up the whole. Does the whole when accounted for yield more to the individual Englishman than the American gets out of his life and living? That brings in your standards and objectives again. The English objective is to get the largest measure of personal liberty, to enjoy living, to make a competence, retire from business in middle life and go to the country and breed dogs or into the house of lords and found a family. If that is a good objective the English philosophy of living lends itself to it. In a society founded on caste it is a natural objective and perhaps the only one an Englishman could have. To attain it he must conserve the forces that support and perpetuate the system so it will yield him what he wants when he gets to the top. He is therefore a born conservative and is against all changes.

The American for Change.

The American who has no such objective is much more likely to want to destroy something to make room for himself. He is therefore all for change, for remaking and reshaping institutions. In business, finance and politics he uses a battering ram to break in. His objective is power, not leisure to cultivate country hedges and lawns. It is these differing objectives that create the standards and theories of life and living which make Americans and Englishmen what they are and so unlike. It is the difference between a race of islanders living under institutions a thousand years old and one that has peopled a new continent in a few generations. Why anybody should expect them to be alike is the puzzle. It seems very certain they never will be while each works with a different set of social and political tools to produce, each for itself, a result which the other must think is an entirely undesirable one.

A LEAVENWORTH BRIBE FINE.

(By The Star's Own Service.)

LEAVENWORTH, KAS., Sept. 26.—Alex Winetraub, Leavenworth clothing merchant, rumored for several months to be the "pay-off" in liquor protection in Leavenworth, today pleaded guilty in district court to charges of bribery and was fined $300, which he paid.

Winetraub was arrested on testimony furnished by George Cummings, former police officer, who last week confessed to accepting bribes. Cummings stated that August 25 he accepted $25 from Winetraub for protection to Ben Gumm, Clarence Hathorne and James and Albert Mallody.

It has been charged in Leavenworth by bootleggers that these four have been operating under police protection. Testimony of this nature was before County Attorney Jesse A. Hall several weeks ago. It was renewed at an inquisition conducted by Robert Mason, assistant attorney general.

Motorist Who Napped at the Wheel Also Draws $50 Fine.

George Ewing, 34 years old, Leavenworth, charged with drunkenness and careless driving, testified in the North Side court today he had been drinking, but said he had fallen asleep at the wheel when his car crashed into a Fifth street street car late yesterday at Guinotte and Woodland avenues.

Ewing, a lineman for a construction company at Leavenworth, was sentenced to ten days at the Municipal Farm and was fined $50 by Otto P. Higgins, acting judge. Police testified they found six bottles of liquor in Ewing's car after the crash.

Impeachment of Highway Commissioners Is Grand Jury Aim.

(By the Associated Press.)

FRANKFORT, KY., Sept. 26.—The Franklin County grand jury, in its final report today, recommended that the 1930 general assembly institute impeachment proceedings against state highway commissioners and J. S. Watkins, state engineer.

The jury did not specify which of the commissioners should, in its opinion, be impeached, but the report criticized severely the alleged conduct of Con Craig, Paducah; W. S. Hanna, Shelbyville, present commissioners, and E. S. Helburn, who resigned recently to become commissioner of internal revenue for Kentucky.

A CUT IN CHANNEL COST

GOOD SAYS NEW ESTIMATE IS DOWN AT LEAST $75,000.

The Problem of Site for Dock Is Troublesome, Secretary Adds, and Action Is Slowed So There Will Be No Mistake.

WASHINGTON BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR
610 ALBEE BUILDING

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—A decrease in the former estimates of the cost of keeping open the Missouri River channel to the Woodswether wharf site in Kansas City to as low as possible from $75,000 to $125,000, was made today by James W. Good, secretary of war, in a conference with Senator Roscoe C. Patterson of Missouri.

Senator Patterson called on Secretary Good to urge speedy action by the war department in settling the dock site controversy in Kansas City. The senator said neither he nor the people generally in Kansas City were interested in any particular site, but their chief concern was to obtain a location approved by the war department so the city might proceed as quickly as possible in erecting a river terminal with the ½ million dollars of bond money.

SHIPPERS HAVE A FAVORITE.

From the standpoint of the shipper, Secretary Good indicated the Woodswether site near the state line was the best one suggested.

Senator Patterson was told the Kansas City wharf problem was a very troublesome one, and that the secretary of war did not want to make a mistake in reaching a decision. He said he would decide the matter in a very short time, but did not say when.

The senator asked if any hearings on the wharf location were planned. Secretary Good replied none was contemplated, but that he would be willing to hear those desiring to present their side of the controversy.

"I'm eager to decide this matter," the secretary added, "and to decide it correctly."

CITY HAS NO FUNDS.

Patterson told the secretary Kansas City had no funds to maintain the channel to any wharf site selected, but Good did not say whether a way might be worked out for the government to assume this responsibility, but inferred that the government would be responsible for maintaining only the main channel.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas today received a letter from Secretary Good in reply to one requesting that Kansas City, Kansas, be heard, if the secretary decided on a hearing.

"Please be assured," Secretary Good wrote in reply, "that in the event a hearing is called with reference to the location of the dock site in Kansas City, I will afford ample opportunity to those interested to prepare material for the hearing."

SAYS PEACOX WAS SANE.

Torch Slayer Knew What He Was Doing, Alienist Asserts.

COURTHOUSE, WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Earle Peacox, the so-called "psychopathic personality," was of a sound mind when he strangled his bride, Dorothy, the night of April 21, last, the first anniversary of their wedding. He "knew what he was doing."

This testimony was given today by a noted alienist, Dr. Menas Gregory, head of the psychopathic department of Bellevue hospital, New York City. Dr. Gregory was called to the stand by the prosecution to refute statements of two defense alienists who testified Wednesday Peacox was a "psychopathic personality," who suffered an "emotional storm" at the time he was choking his wife and therefore could not distinguish right from wrong.

FOUR BOMBINGS FOR HIM

CHICAGO MAN ALSO HAS BEEN KIDNAPED AND ROBBED.

Gangs Again Attack Wealthy Motor Car Dealer Whose Home Has Been Target and Stables Burned.

(By the Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Emil Denemark, wealthy motor car dealer and sportsman, who in recent years has been the victim of bombers, kidnapers, robbers and firebugs, experienced his fourth bombing early today.

A black powder "pineapple" exploded at the rear entrance of his garage and salesroom at Ogden and Springfield avenues. Property damage was several hundred dollars. A 4-year-old child, asleep at home a block away, was injured when force of the explosion shook a heavy plaque from the wall, the plaque striking the child on the head.

Thrice before the salesroom has been bombed. Two years ago a Negro janitor lost a leg in one of the bomb explosions. Once the Denemark home in Oak Park was bombed.

Mrs. Denemark owns a string of valuable race horses, including Frances and Blackwood, the latter winner of the $25,000 Lincoln Fields handicap early this month. Six thoroughbreds were destroyed some time ago when the Denemark stables were set afire.

A year ago Denemark was kidnaped and held several days for ransom. When he was released he declined to discuss the abduction or say how much, if any, ransom was paid. In one hold-up he reported the loss of $25,000 in cash and jewels, and in another he lost $2,500. A police officer, on guard at the Denemark home, also was held up in the second hold-up.

Shortly after the bombing of his Oak Park home in February, 1927, Denemark's Negro chauffeur was slain mysteriously.

The total damage done by the three salesroom bombings was estimated today at more than $20,000. The salesroom is also headquarters for radio station WEDC, owned by Denemark.

A year ago Denemark headed a syndicate negotiating for the purchase of the Arlington race track. It was stated by newspapers then that Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, Chicago "beer barons," were behind a plan to gain control of the track. Denemark, however, made positive denial that either Druggan or Lake was connected in any way with his offer.

PEACE PANACEA NOT YET.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 26.—The American War Mothers' stand for preparedness was praised here last night by Rear Admiral R. E. Coontz, who asserted in an address before the convention that the world still awaited a practical panacea for peace.

Admiral Coontz said the United States was "a great, rich and powerful country" and that "it does not behoove us to be stingy with our defense or with our defenders."

Mrs. Alfred J. Brousseau, honorary president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, denounced "professional revolutionary agitators" and the spirit of Soviet Russia.

"There are fifteen revolutionist schools in the United States," she asserted.

A GRUDGE ELEMENT

Unfriendliness Marks Attitude of Loughran and Sharkey Toward Each Other.

EXPERTS AND BETS VARY

Bulletin.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — A poll made today reveals that Tommy Loughran is the choice of most New York boxing critics to win the big heavyweight elimination bout tonight at the Yankee stadium.

Jack Sharkey, however, is a slight favorite with the betting fraternity, his chances of defeating the Philadelphia mauler being quoted along Broadway at 6 to 5. Approximately nine writers pick Loughran to emerge victorious, while five are stringing with Sharkey. In some instances different writers on the same newspaper have expressed varying opinions.

BY WALTER TRUMBULL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Sharkey-Loughran engagement at the Yankee stadium tonight should be a really fine heavyweight bout. Loughran doesn't think a lot of Sharkey, and Tommy is one of the three fighters against whom the Boston sailor really holds a grudge. This should make for action.

The story that these two boxers do not like each other isn't just ballyhoo. It's a fact. Sharkey always has said that there were three men in the game it would give him keen pleasure to sock. One was Jim Maloney, and Jack got him; the second was Gene Tunney, and the third Tommy Loughran.

Sharkey always had admiration for Dempsey and he told me once that he had a hard time working himself into a fighting frame of mind against the former champion. He still likes Dempsey, in spite of any talk of low blows. But he certainly does not like Loughran, and Tommy hasn't a lot of use for Jack.

BOTH IN FINE CONDITION.

Both men seem to be in grand condition. Sharkey worked out at Stillman's gymnasium yesterday and continued to look as strong as a bull. Tommy didn't do any work of record, but Joe Smith told me Loughran was feeling fine and was thoroughly confident of his ability to win this bout.

It is one of the hardest matches to figure in ring history. If you knew just how the men would fight it might be easier, but you don't.

Sharkey at his best is a great fighter and, as the saying goes, don't let anybody tell you different. He has ring instinct, and when he wants to fight he is as deadly as a cobra. But Jack has so much temperament that nobody, including himself, knows how he will perform in the ring. He can fight like a champion and he can fight like a Palooka.

TOMMY BEST IN A TEST.

Tommy Loughran, on the other hand, is a money fighter. He always does his stuff when the going is roughest. You know that he will give the best he has, and the best he has is mighty good. He is tough, game, and probably the best boxer of his weight since Jim Corbett.

Sharkey's supporters figure that Loughran will be slowed up by trying to go in at a poundage which is over his best weight. They think that, to be at the peak of efficiency, Tommy should not scale over 178, and that if he does his speed will suffer. But I doubt whether Loughran will weigh over 183 for this fight and I believe that he can carry that and remain fast.

Both men have been at work developing a punch, but I don't think either of them will start to make a rushing fight of it. I am almost sure that Loughran will box until he sees his opening, and then, perhaps, he may pile in with one of those flurries of fighting which he frequently displays.

Sharkey is a quantity you cannot figure, but I believe that he will try to force Loughran to lead. If Jack rushes in with a flock of wild blows he is likely to get into trouble.

LONG FIGHT AIDS LOUGHRAN.

The rushing style of fighting is right down Loughran's alley. If an opponent will rush and give Tommy a chance to set himself and counter, the opponent is apt to look as if a woodpecker had been working on him. That is one of the things that happened to young James Braddock.

On the other hand, Loughran is a boxer who warms up slowly, and, knowing this Sharkey may elect to go after him from the opening bell and get him before he strikes his stride. The longer a fight goes, the better Loughran gets.

That the customers anticipate a stout engagement is emphasized by the ticket sale. William F. Carey, who is always conservative, has already lost several bets to his associates at the Garden on the size of the gate. If tonight is fair and warm, the receipts are likely to run well over the $300,000 mark.

ROTARY BACKS BLUES' FETE.

Club Council Waives October Meeting for Baseball Luncheon.

"As president of the Rotary Club," the Rev. James P. DeWolfe said today, "I urge that as many members of Rotary attend the Victory luncheon as possible. At the high tide of victory let us demonstrate to the Blues our appreciation and gratitude. At the last meeting it was unanimously agreed we should waive our October 1 meeting so that all Rotarians could attend this civic tribute to the Blues. Only on one other occasion during the past three years has the Rotary council seen fit to waive a meeting for any civic affair."

Fully 40 per cent attending the Blues' luncheon will be women, according to George P. Meek. "It has been a splendid revelation of the enthusiasm and the gratitude of the women of this city," said Mr. Meek. "Also their curiosity. They will have an opportunity to dine with the players and meet them and their wives. What woman can resist such a combination?"

SPORTING COMMENT

By The Star's Sports Editor.

THIS week has brought the vanishing of two great characters of sportdom, into "that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death." Miller Huggins was a leader of baseball, a quaint character, destined to go down in baseball history as one of its greatest team managers. Sam Hildreth, eccentric figure of turfdom, long will be remembered as one of the most able trainers of thoroughbreds.

Miller Huggins was just coming into his own as far as a thorough enjoyment of life was concerned. Under 50, with a fortune sufficient to let him live in luxury if he never managed another ball club, a home in Florida, this mite of a baseball man should have been due for many years. Yet it may be that Miller Huggins got more satisfaction out of driving to pennants and world's series championships, handling the daily burdens of a team of temperamental stars than he would have gotten in retirement.

THERE were times in Miller Huggins's career as a Yankee manager when events rolled not smoothly for the little fellow. That was when Colonel Ruppert and "Cap" Huston were co-owners of the club. Ruppert liked Huggins. Huston didn't. Huston was the dominant figure in the partnership.

A story I had recently from a major league scout had it that "Cap" Huston and "Your Uncle" Wilbert Robinson, rotund manager of the Brooklyn club, were buddies down in Florida in the winter and that Huston wanted Robinson to handle the Yankee reins.

It was this antagonism on the part of one of his club owners that made the managerial work of Huggins so difficult. Ruth with others were hard to handle. Huggins couldn't "bear down" on his temperamental stars when they could run to Huston and "get by."

FINALLY the showdown. Ruppert and Huston came to the parting of their baseball ways. Huston got out. Ruppert became the sole owner of the Yankees. One of his first acts was to let it be known that Miller Huggins was the boss of the Yanks, in complete control, his word the last court of appeals.

Miller Huggins met the test. Not so long afterward the baseball world was startled one morning to read that Babe Ruth, the mighty home-run hitter of the New York Yankees, had been fined $5,000 and sent back to New York. Miller Huggins was running his ball club.

Ruth went to Col. Ruppert. The colonel told his great star that Huggins was running the ball club and that he'd have to see Huggins. Ruth saw him, apologized to him, promised to straighten up his personal conduct and finally was taken back into the fold. Miller Huggins had come into his own as Boss of his baseball camp.

SAM HILDRETH was a great horseman. There are many excellent judges of horses but few with the Hildreth ability to tell what a horse will do from indications subtle or obscure.

I recall a conversation with Sam Hildreth several years ago when the late turfman was visiting with the late Irwin Kirkwood, editor of The Star, a Marylander who loved fine horses. Broad-shouldered and white-haired, a short white mustache, wearing the burnished livery of the sun, Hildreth seemed reticent when the talk turned to horses. They say he was that way with strangers.

At the track he was even more so. Approached by a stranger at the track Sam Hildreth would "fold up" as far as conversation about horses went.

ON rare occasions, usually in the company of old friends, Hildreth would give a line on his opinion of the field that day. When Harry Sinclair was introduced to him as "a baseball fan who is just finding out about racing," Hildreth penciled the entry he liked in each race.

Sinclair took readily to the game, buying an interest in a horse Hildreth was racing under his own colors. That was the beginning of the partnership between Sinclair and Hildreth. Later they bought Rancocas, the stud farm Pierre Lorillard had built at Jobstown, N. J. When the proposition grew into big money, Hildreth sold his interest to the oil magnate, taking a position as trainer and general manager at a big salary and a percentage of the winnings.

LIKE many another patron of the turf, Sam Hildreth, Missourian by birth, had his ups and downs. He died a millionaire, or nearly that; but many a time he was broke so that there were days when Mrs. Hildreth had a hard time to spread the evening meal on the family table. Once Hildreth was hurt in a street car accident. On leaving the hospital, he was paid $5,000 damages. He bet the money on a horse that afternoon. The horse won.

However, when Hildreth turned more from betting to the training of horses, he began to save his money, although even then he wagered in greater amounts than generally was known.

Among the famous horses trained by Hildreth were Mad Play, Hourless, Stromboli, Silver Fox, Grey Lag, Superlette, Nedana and Zev. This horse won more than $300,000. In four years the Rancocas stable won $1,200,000 in purses.

AT some time or other a Hildreth trained horse has won nearly every racing fixture of the country. Only once, however, did one of his thoroughbreds turn a victory in the Kentucky derby. That was when Zev won in 1923.

Hildreth always had his horses ready to do their best. When he would look his horses over in the morning before the matin exercises he would be quick to see the horses that were fit for a race. These he would send back to the barn. They needed no exercise. They were ready. Hildreth believed in keeping his horses fat. They lasted longer that way, he believed, and retained top form with only short layoffs during an entire season.

One season he reached Jamaica with twenty 2-year-olds. "Nothing much," he said. But in the first two weeks he had one or more winners each day and in many of the races his entries finished one-two. He had told the truth. He didn't have much but the horses he had were in top condition, ready for the going. When the other stables reached that period of perfection the Hildreth winnings fell off.

LIKE many another sportsman, Sam Hildreth was a victim of superstition, or he at least gave himself to superstitious whims. Once he shipped some horses to Pimlico, believing they would arrive at the track on a Thursday. Arriving at the track Friday morning, Hildreth inquired as to the time the horses reached the stables.

"This morning," he was told.

"All right," he said, "pack them up tomorrow. We're going to Bowie."

He wasn't racing horses at a track when they reached there on a Friday.

When Zev and Papyrus, the English derby winner, raced at Belmont a special inclosure was built where the two horses could be saddled.

"It's a rare occasion," a track official said. "The crowd is so big——"

"What do you think I want to do," Sam Hildreth broke in, "change my luck?"

Papyrus was saddled in the special inclosure. Hildreth, one of his hobbies being the saddling of his own horses, went on about his saddling in his own special spot.

Zev won that race, sometimes referred to as "The International Derby," and that memorable victory might be taken as a fitting climax of Sam Hildreth's worthy turf career.

The best ball record for the eighteen holes at Mission Hills was broken yesterday by John Taylor, jr., H. F. Bagby, J. E. Nugent and Joe Matthews. The best ball was a 61, lowering the old mark of 62. The low ball by holes:

Taylor, jr., had a 70, Bagby 75 and Nugent 71. Matthews quit at the end of the thirteenth.

A big banquet for Arthur DeKuh, the New York Italian heavyweight contender who meets Angus Snyder, "The Kansas Destroyer," in the feature bout on the American Legion fight card at Convention hall here October 4, will be staged by the Campo-Manfre post of the Legion, composed largely of Italian veterans of the World War.

"DeKuh is the idol of the Italians in New York, who consider him the greatest fighter in the world," Danzo said, "and we of Italian blood in Kansas City welcome this opportunity to entertain him."

The date for the dinner, which will be given at Johnny Bondon's, will not be definitely set until DeKuh arrives here, some time Sunday. Snyder also is expected in Sunday.

Harry S. Davis, Kansas City member of the boxing commission, today approved a boost in the customary fight prices for the DeKuh-Snyder fight.

"It is evident that a fight of this caliber is entitled to more money than others. It is the commission's ambition to encourage big fights here, and the only way in which we can do it is to lend our aid in every manner possible. For this reason the commission readily approves the increase made necessary by the costliness of the bout. A much higher price doubtlessly would be charged for the same attraction in New York or Chicago."

The price range for the fight, approved by the commission, is from $1.10 to $4.40. Tickets were placed on sale today at the usual places.

A NEW MILLION-DOLLAR RESORT

"Playa Ensenada" in Lower California Opens Next Month.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—Gene Normile, former manager of Jack Dempsey, announced here today he was one of the sponsors of a new pleasure resort, to be opened at Ensenada, Lower California, sixty miles south of the American border, next month.

Normile said the new resort would represent an investment of approximately 1 million dollars to consist of a large club house, hotel, golf course, beach and pier. He also said M. P. Phillips, Los Angeles capitalist, had secured concessions from the Mexican government for a period of from thirty to forty years for the resort, which will be called "Playa Ensenada."

Fred Schulte on Casualty List.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Fred Schulte, Brownie outfielder, has returned to St. Louis for medical treatment as the result of continued pains in the head, apparently the result of his collision with Heinie Manush at Sportsman's Park, August 21. He was unconscious for ten minutes after the accident.

Trick Plays Expected From Indians, Playing First Contest Under "Lone Star" Deitz, New Coach—Seats for 11,000.

LAWRENCE, KAS., Sept. 26.—Coach "Lone Star" Deitz this afternoon sent his Haskell Indians through their last hard workout prior to their opening season encounter with Friends university here Friday night.

Lawrence fans await the coming game with unusual interest, not alone because of the introduction of night football, but it will give them their first opportunity to see a Haskell eleven coached by Deitz. Announcement by Coach Deitz that he hoped to have an eleven noted for its trick plays, such as won fame for Carlisle in days gone by, has led to anticipation of a feat of open play in the opening game.

Officials for the game, announced today by Frank W. McDonald, director of athletics at Haskell, are Leslie Edmonds of Topeka, referee; C. E. McBride, sports editor of The Kansas City Star, umpire, and W. P. Rowley of The Kansas City Star, head linesman.

McDonald also announced tonight that Haskell had arranged floodlighted parking space for 1,000 motor cars at the Haskell stadium and that there would be additional parking space on lighted streets.

Advance sale from nearby cities has been heavy, many reservations having been made by Kansas City fans. The Haskell stadium seats 11,000 persons.

WILCOX BACK TO RING.

Oklahoma's Firpo Will Be on Mat Card Here Monday Night.

After two years' retirement from all athletic activities, Firpo Wilcox, the Oklahoma cave man, will start a comeback campaign for heavyweight wrestling honors on Monday night's card at Convention hall.

Firpo, who both wrestled and fought here, was barred for one year from the Convention hall ring for his persistent rough-house tactics. Wilcox repeatedly knocked out his wrestling opponents with right hooks to the jaw. He was warned in his last match by Promoter Kaufman, but it ended in the customary manner—a knockout in Firpo's favor. Kaufman told him at the time it was his last match in the hall for a year's time, and the Oklahoma wild man has been among the missing since.

Wilcox doubled in gloves also, and his epic battle with Joe Wolff at Memorial hall in Kansas City, Kansas, still is remembered by local fight fans. Firpo will start his comeback campaign against Leo Wycoff, the mauling mechanic, in a limit match preceding the Sarpolis-Malcewicz mat contest Monday night.

PHYSICIAN SAYS FIGHT FOR YANKEES SAPPED STRENGTH.

All Baseball Will Pay Tribute to the Doughty Little Manager's Memory at Services Tomorrow.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—If casualty lists were issued in baseball, we should see one this morning reading something like this:

"Killed in Action—Miller J. Huggins."

The mighty midget of the Yankees lies dead when, on the word of Dr. Edward King, his physician, he might be alive if the stamina he devoted to the losing pennant battle of his ball team had been hoarded for the benefit of his own physical well-being. Taxed more and more by each succeeding baseball campaign, the miniature commander of the Ruppert Rifles was drained of strength when he entered St. Vincent's hospital last Friday, and was an easy prey for the toxins which ended his life yesterday afternoon.

All baseball will pay tribute to him at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon when funeral services will be held at the Church of the Transfiguration, the Little Church Around the Corner. The limited space will be far overtaxed by the baseball host which will be present to pay respect to the Yankee manager.

After services here the body will be placed aboard a train for Cincinnati, where Huggins will be buried Sunday beside his father and his mother.

Cincinnati Young Business Man Buys Control of Club.

(By the Associated Press.)

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 26.—Sidney Weil, wealthy Cincinnati young business man, today announced he had obtained enough shares in the Cincinnati baseball club to assure his control. Within a few days he will become a director, and it is assumed he will be elected to the presidency.

Weil said he believed the Reds would be a paying venture, but added his first thought would be to build up a winning team as rapidly as possible.

MAROON-RODRIQUEZ BOUT TONIGHT ATTRACTS FIGHT FANS.

Both of Rival Bantamweights Express Confidence in Outcome of the International Arena Feature.

The New International Arena, Fifteenth street and Troost avenue, will be opened formally and auspiciously tonight when Tommy Maroon and Blaz Rodriquez, rival claimants for the title of bantamweight champion of the West, meet in a 10-round encounter which has attracted more attention than any other match in the lighter divisions here in years.

An air of pomp and ceremony will prevail in the dedicational features prior to the first of the four fights on the initial card, with dinner jackets and gleaming shirt fronts lending a touch foreign to most fistic enterprises. The arena, built to replace the old International, destroyed by fire last winter, represents an investment of $80,000 and is said to be the most elaborate and complete sports center west of Chicago.

The Maroon-Rodriquez battle—a fight "natural" here—is expected to tax the 3,500 seating capacity of the arena to the limit. The advance sale of tickets has been the heaviest for any fight between boxers of the lighter divisions staged here since the revival of boxing.

Both fighters today expressed confidence in the outcome. "Maroon's fine record of knockout victories will not avail him anything tonight," Rodriquez said. "I am going in to win and I will win."

"I will give my best and I believe I can turn back Rodriquez," Maroon said.

The winner in tonight's fight will be offered a championship shot, Nate Becker, promoter, has announced.

YEA, verily, this Dr. Karl Sarpolis, the heavyweight wrestler, is a versatile cuss. Not only does he wrestle, but he sings crooning melodies, plays the violin, leads orchestras and his latest is to rescue a man from the electric chair.

"I think Dr. Sarpolis saved a man's life by giving him artificial respiration," applauds Promoter Kaufman. The wrestler was on the platform the other night when the man who defies the electric chair bit off more volts than he could chew. The doctor-wrestler-violinist stepped into action with his first aid.

You can't even tie these modern wrestlers.

Indianapolis will be represented at the junior series here by two of its notables. One is Tom Hayden, the Wabash railroad's Baron Munchausen. Hayden is the boy who meets the Blues when they go to Indianapolis and tries to tell them about his golf scores. His pet aversion is Harry Bermingham, the club's sec. The other to come is Joe Spahr, who feeds all ball clubs in Indianapolis. Joe has a steak and chop house and what he turns out makes the ordinary steak look like so much bread and water.

Boswell's Life of Denver Grigsby.

He was born in Denver. That explains that part of it. At least that's our understanding.

He is a quiet fellow, but sometimes after the games in the clubhouse he giggles. He won't ever tell why.

There is a little Miss Grigsby and Denver thinks there is nothing like her.

One day he made a throw to the plate from left field and the catcher had to move three inches to get it. That made Denver mad.

He likes Kansas City and Kansas City likes him.

He is an outfielder, by the way.

IF there is anybody here who has heard the expression, "getting an ear full," and wants to know what it means the opportunity is before him if he only will get in touch with the Columbus Senators and arrange a little confab with Catchers Shinault and Devine.

They will be glad to talk and their rate is very reasonable. They can be hired by the hour, the day or week. Preferably by the week because neither one can get sufficiently warmed up to do himself justice in a day.

The listener will hear a jangled conversation about almost anything in general. The talk may go off on a tangent, but will drift back to baseball.

Here is a glorious chance to hear something that may not be worth listening to, but which is different than anything else, at any rate.

Call the Columbus club and ask for Shinault and Devine. They will be found in the biggest chairs of the lobby.

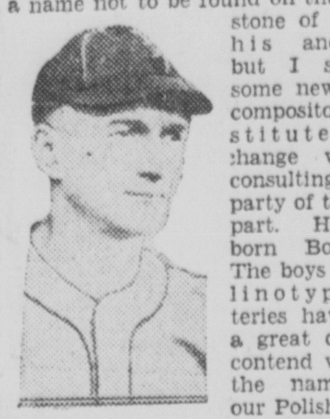
Who Are These Macks

By Westbrook Pegler.

THERE was a time when ball players, like prize fighters, adopted Irish names for professional purposes. There are still quite a few Sharkeys, Murphys, Ryans, Duffys and Kellys of Italian or Jewish ancestry in the ring, but in baseball there has been a modern tendency to go by the old family name, be it ever so tight a fit in a half column box score.

Joe Boley, the shortstop of Connie Mack's world series ball club, goes by a name not to be found on the headstone of any of his ancestors, but I suppose some newspaper compositor instituted the change without consulting the party of the first part. He was born Bolensky. The boys on the linotype batteries have had a great deal to contend with in the names of our Polish, Jewish, Lithuanian and Italian athletes—names that would run clear across a line of type and turn the corner unless arbitrarily curbed. They used to set Stanley Coveleskie's name as "C*v'k'e" and I have seen the name of Bevo Lebourveau, the gypsy nomad of the majors and big minors, boiled down to "Le'b'vo" in the box scores.



Joe Boley.

THEY LIKE TO PLAY BALL AND FIGHT.

Anyway, Joe Boley is Johnny Bolensky around his old home town of Mahanoy City—the city beautiful!—Pa., in the God-forgottenest region of the Pennsylvania coal belt. He was born there thirty-one years ago and he and Bucky Harris and Mike McNally and the Latzo boys of the ring and some others formed a group who won big success in athletics in spite of unpromising early conditions. They love to play ball and fight in those hills.

Boley had a strange career with the Baltimore club of the International League. He served Jack Dunn through that remarkable career of championships when the Baltimore team was so good that the other seven firms in the league finally had to complain. Joe found himself in a curious fix. He was receiving about $9,000 a year, which is major league pay, but it seemed impossible for him to advance into the majors because the big league buyers shied at the purchase price and the salary figure.

Dunn liked Boley and didn't want to hold him back and I believe he shaved his price when he finally sold Joe to Connie Mack in 1925 after eight years. It was then believed that Joe had lived out his time and passed his peak before coming to the major leagues. But the record seems to dispose of such misgivings. Mack had tried many shortstops, but Boley clicked and continued to click until the club finally won its way into the world series.

JOE HITS WHEN THEY NEED 'EM.

This has not been a fair year on which to judge Boley's work. His throwing arm weakened last spring and it hasn't been at its best all season. Moreover, he hasn't been hitting as reliably as he used to, although the old man likes to see him go to bat with runners on base, because he hits best when the pressure is heaviest. His average has been down in the .280s, but, as Connie says, "He got a lot of his hits with the hit and run sign hanging out."

Joe is a steady hand, after such long experience, and a great comfort in double plays. He and Jimmy Foxx, the juvenile first baseman, have worked into a lightning combination, killing off many runners coming down from first and doubling the hitter with a quick return to Foxx.

Joe and Max Bishop, the second baseman, also taken from Baltimore, probably find little to say at their work, being less talky than most athletes, but there is this difference between Joe and Max, that Joe has the spirit of a ball player and loves the thrills of the game, whereas Max has the soul of an employee doing his appointed job.

"I like his disposition," the old man says. "I like a fellow who likes to play, and, even in a mediocre year, for him, Joe has been a darned good shortstop."

OHIO STATE STAR MAY GO.

(By the Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Allen Holman, star Ohio State quarterback, may not be permitted to compete another season for the Buckeyes after all.

Although the Ohio State faculty committee has sanctioned his eligibility the Big Ten is investigating his status further to see whether his case is similar to that of Mayes McLain, Iowa's Indian fullback of 1928, who was forced out of Big Ten competition because of the conference's 3-year rule.

Holman, whose presence would lift a big load of worry from the mind of Coach Sam Willaman at Ohio State's gridiron camp, played football at Parsons college, Iowa, before coming to the Buckeye institution, and unless some technicality is found, seems certain to be barred.

KALIS GETS A LICENSE.

State Commission Also Acts on Other Applications.

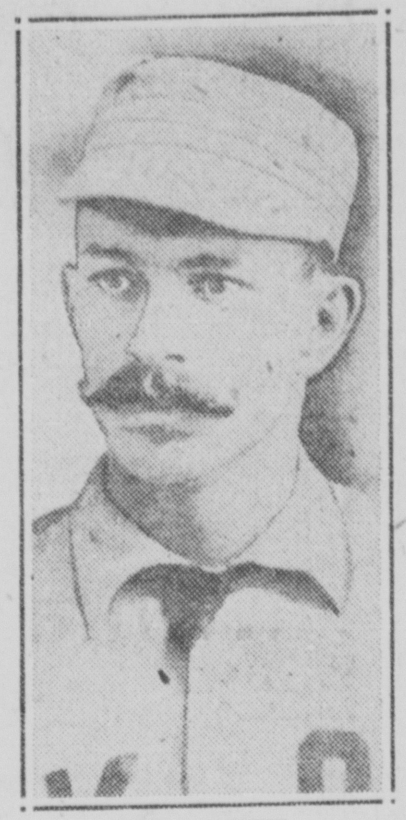
SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 26.—Eleven licenses were granted by Secretary Ben J. Harrison of the Missouri athletic commission, as follows: Dr. L. F. Ferguson of St. Joseph, physician, bringing the total to four; Charles Palmer of Buffalo, N. Y., Simon A. Kalis of Kansas City and P. G. Lippert of Grand Island, Neb., managers, bringing the total to thirty-three; Ben Judd of Denver, bringing the total to thirteen seconds, and Jimmy Carter, Shawnee, Ok., Dewey Young, Kansas City, Victor Manley, Grand Island, Neb., Fred Reese, Osawatomie, Kas., and Benny Ross of Kenmore, N. Y., boxers, bringing the total to 114.

The Blues of Other Days

Being a History of Kansas City's 45 Years of Baseball

CHAPTER XII—The 1894 Season a Hot One.

THERE was no vast amount of baseball interest in Kansas City in 1893 and the reason was obvious: there was little baseball. When April rolled around, the Western League, of which Kansas City had been a member, was on the rocks. Manager Lucas and his Blues engaged in a number of exhibition games.



JIMMY MANNING.

In June the Western circuit finally was reorganized and started with Kansas City, St. Joseph, Topeka and Lawrence as the clubs, but soon was wrecked again. The Blues thereupon engaged St. Joseph in a series for the synthetic championship of the Missouri Valley section, but that only brought a yawn from the fans.

The following season the league was placed on a more substantial basis and went through an interesting season. Kansas City finished third, and that proved a disappointment, since everybody had picked the Blues to win the championship.

A POPULAR ROAD TEAM.

Jimmy Manning's boys were extremely popular that season. Known as the "Bluebirds of the Kaw," they drew big crowds on the road. They devised their own battle cry and it went: "Who, who, who are we? Kansas City B. B. C." The player who originated that cry should have been given a bonus.

The final standings that year were as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Sioux City	74	51	.592
Toledo	67	55	.549
Kansas City	68	58	.539
Minneapolis	63	62	.504
Grand Rapids	62	65	.488
Indianapolis	60	65	.480
Detroit	56	69	.448
Milwaukee	48	74	.393

Jimmy Manning's Bluebirds follow:

It was an eventful season for followers of the Blues. Sioux City came here for an important series of games in August and Kansas City showed rare enthusiasm. The Sunday game, August 26, drew a paid attendance of 8,100. The Blues won all three, taking the Sabbath encounter by a 15 to 7 score.

LADIES HAD BASEBALL SCRUPLES.

"Even the ladies laid aside their scruples and came out," said the account of that game.

Mention of that game would not be complete without relating the trick play Manning pulled on the visitors. Stewart of the Sioux City team stole second in one inning. Catcher Donohue's throw went into center field, but Manning acted as though he had caught the ball. He made the stunt look more realistic by bawling out the umpire for calling the runner safe.

While this little burlesque was going on Stewart stood at second and listened and when the center fielder had retrieved the ball and returned it to second the runner was somewhat wrathy to think he had been duped in such a manner.

A BIG DAY FOR MANNING.

That not only caused the crowd to cheer Manager Manning vociferously, but the star further enhanced his popularity by getting five hits in as many trips to the plate. One of the blows was a triple.

Pete Daniels was the pitching ace of that team. His lucky smile was the thing that caused the crowd to want to see him pitch.

The last game of the schedule that season was played in Toledo, and the Bluebirds were beaten, 5 to 8. But everybody voted it a successful year and said the best team didn't win.

RUFF, GRINNELL STAR, INJURED.

(By the Associated Press.)

GRINNELL, IA, Sept. 26.—An epidemic of leg injuries knocked some of the growing optimism out of Grinnell college football boosters.

Russell Ruff, last year's king pin in the Pioneer aerial attack, is the latest victim. He will not see action in the Penn college game Saturday. Coach Fuzz Watt allowed his men to indulge in only a light practice today, fearful of further injuries.

Gas Heat
Gives Even Temperature Day or Night

Play before Bedtime,

An even temperature is of vital importance in homes where children have their play before bedtime. A sudden change in temperature is decidedly harmful to their health.

Automatic gas heat is one of the best forms of health insurance. It can be perfectly adjusted to any degree of heat desired and maintained indefinitely, eliminating entirely uneven and varying house temperatures.

Think of a home in which your loved ones dress in warmth and comfort—breakfast in a cozy, well heated dining room—a home that is heated evenly throughout the entire day. A home in which the interior stays clean and fresh all Winter long. No more dust, soot, or dirt. Heat in just the quantity needed whether in the Fall, Winter or early Spring. A warmth that is clean—a warmth without work.

THE TALKIES TO HIS BED

A Motion Picture "Fan," Brookfield, Mo., Man Gets Synopsis of the Story, Then Radio Microphone Carries the Sound.

Since the advent of the talkies there has been a race between those who find things wrong with them and those who find things right. It has become a fascinating game with nearly all theater-goers participating.

The anti-talkie team scored a big victory some time ago when the studios were deluged with letters from deaf persons complaining that the movies had been spoiled for them, now that the subtitle was eliminated and dialogue substituted. No one had suspected the "comes dawn" caption would be missed, but it had its mourners, and critics of the talkies had scored a point.

But now there comes the counter-story. It comes from Brookfield, Mo., and it explains that, although the talkies have deprived the deaf of part of movie stories, they can carry the complete action to the bedridden.

MOVIES HIS BOYHOOD THRILL.

Wade Patrick of Brookfield was reared on motion pictures. They were his boyhood recreation. He enjoyed the racing cowboys and the tumbling Indians. Then the war came. With adventure still inspiring him, he enlisted in the aviation corps and went to France. Shortly before the armistice he met with a disastrous accident which left him permanently bedridden.

With the advent of radio, he took up the study of the new science and soon was building and repairing radios. This trade, which he carries on in his bed, has enabled him to make a living despite his infirmity.

He still retained his interest in motion pictures. He read the fan magazines and kept track of the activities of his old favorites. Sometimes people who had been to the DeGraw theater in Brookfield would stop by the house and tell him what they had seen on the screen.

THE DIALOGUE TO HIM.

Recently the Midland circuit of theaters installed talkies in the DeGraw and great excitement reigned in Brookfield. Of course Wade Patrick heard about it. That set him thinking. Now perhaps the movies could come to the man who could not go to them. He sent word to the manager and asked him what could be done about it.

The manager was sympathetic. A telephone line was strung from Wade Patrick's bed to the DeGraw theater. There is a microphone in front of the screen. Every day the theater sends him a synopsis of the picture being shown, and so the bedridden member of the audience knows just what is going on when Dr. Fu Manchu speaks in his insidious tones or Madame X wails to the jury.

HOG CHOLERA IN IOWA.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 26.—The worst outbreak of hog cholera in Iowa for two or three years is reported by Charles D. Reed, government meteorologist, in his weekly weather and crop report. The disease is becoming serious. In some neighborhoods nearly all of the hogs have died.

At the same time the number of cattle being brought into the state is larger than last year, due to the promise of a larger corn crop.

About 73 per cent of corn is now safe, the report said, and has so far escaped frost, and some upland corn, mainly in the last two tiers of counties, will yet mature if weather is favorable. The killing frost on the morning of September 18 was general in three-fourths of the state. It killed all tender vegetation and corn leaves in the area visited except in some scattered high land districts.

STRONG UPTURN IN WHEAT.

The buying movement in wheat futures, which was under way in the late dealings yesterday and halted a prolonged decline, was resumed actively this morning, and prices rose sharply. Contrary to recent sessions, offerings were light and shorts were forced to bid up prices to cover.

The close was near the high level of the day, up 3 to 3¼ cents in Kansas City and 2⅝ to 3¾ cents in Chicago.

Unexpected strength in foreign markets, indications of a revived export demand and private reports of a reduced yield in Australia were the principal buying influences.

Liverpool futures advanced sharply in response to an improved continental demand and a private estimate of Australia's wheat crop of 100 million bushels. Closing prices were near the high levels, up 3¼ to 3¾ cents for the day. The market was due only about a cent higher.

An improved demand for export wheat from North America was in evidence, with exporters reporting bids from France and Italy in fair volume. Moderate sales to India were claimed. Sales today were estimated at 1 million bushels in all positions.

Receipts of wheat at Kansas City were fairly liberal, 180 cars, an increase of 47 cars over a week ago and 28 cars less than a year ago. Spring wheat markets had moderate arrivals.

Corn futures derived strength from the advance in wheat and some unfavorable crop comment. Prices closed near the high level, up 2½ to 3½ cents for September and 1 to 1⅜ cents for later months.

Receipts of corn were light here, 27 cars; a decrease of 15 cars from a week ago and 34 cars less than a year ago. St. Louis had a fairly liberal run, 83 cars, and inspections at Chicago were 175 cars.

GAINS IN MOST STOCKS.

New York, Sept. 26.—A strong rally occurred in stocks this morning, after prices had changed their course several times in the early dealings. Largest gains generally were in the utilities.

The advance in the Bank of England's rediscount note contributed to the feeling of unrest; although having been forecast for several weeks it apparently had been discounted.

At the high point Adams Express was up 30 points, Standard Gas rose 10⅛, General Electric 9⅝, National Biscuit 10½, American Water Works 7⅞, Atlantic Gulf 5¾, Byers 8¼, Simmons 4¾, Allis-Chalmers 5½, United States Freight 9½, Western Union 5⅛, International Telephone 3¼, and Murray 5⅛.

A few issues were under selling pressure during most of the session, including Du Pont, Safeway Stores and Bendix. Columbia Carbon dropped about 12 points early and regained the loss.

Houston Oil led that group, rising 5⅝ points. American Republics was up 3⅞ and about a dozen other oils a point or so.

Many of the utilities extended their gains in the last hour. Standard Gas sold up about 20 points, American Telephone 7, National Biscuit 12, Commercial Solvents 13½, Philadelphia Company 6 and Underwood-Elliott 8. Marmon extended its loss to about 13 points. The close generally was strong.

Transactions in the first half hour were 450,000 shares; to noon, 1,745,000; to 1:30 p. m., 2,703,000; to 2:10 p. m., 3,131,000; total, 4,004,000 shares; bonds, $8,447,000.

The range of prices for the leading issues on the New York Stock Exchange, the closing prices today and the closing prices yesterday, as reported by the Associated Press, are as follows:

WALL STREET COMMENT.

New York, Sept. 26.—The long-expected advance in the Bank of England discount rate was announced today. The rate was raised from 5½ to 6½ per cent. It was 4½ per cent a year ago and was raised to 5½ per cent last February. The bank's gold has decreased 100 million dollars this year and is about 180 million less than a year ago. It is a curious situation that London should have been shipping gold to France when the French bank rate is only 3½ per cent. More gold has gone to France than has come to America, despite the high rates prevailing here. Large amounts of foreign money are known is to be loaned on call in Wall street—more for France than any other country. It is assumed that the higher London rate will cause some withdrawals of foreign funds from Wall street, though the 9 per cent rate here is still attractive, compared with even a 6½ per cent London bank rate.

General Motors Corporation monthly statement shows sales to users in August of 173,884 cars, 13,579 less than a year ago and 50,000 less than the high record made last April. It is the first month since January to show a decrease from the sales of the corresponding month last year, and confirms recent reports of diminishing demand. The decrease, however, is so small that it does not indicate any important slump in the industry. August sales were 15,000 larger than two years ago.

Two comments from a Wall street cynic: "International Harvester is due for a rise. When a corporation executive tells the public that his company's stock is too high, the price promptly advances." Stock split-ups work out the other way. The bulls spread the rumor that such and such a stock is to be split; traders buy it on the rumor, the price rises to such a height that a split is deemed advisable by the company, and there you are."

The abrupt slump in Chrysler, which carried that stock into new low territory, brought a statement from the head of that company that present low price levels of motor stocks are not justified by the business conditions in the industry. Chrysler units in the period from July 1 to September 21, this year, he said, against 88,263 units in the same period last year and 78,740 units in that period of 1927. "In the case of Chrysler, at least," he said, "there has been none of the decline in retail sales currently rumored and there is ample evidence that motor stock prices are following the trend of the stock market rather than any real trend of the automobile business."

Market value of General Motors common stock has decreased more than a billion dollars from the high level. The value of Chrysler Motor stock has slumped 300 million dollars; Graham-Paige, 35 million; Hupp, 30 million; Nash, 110 million. About 200 million dollars has been lopped off of Radio market value from its high level.

Only the regular dividend was voted by the Anaconda Copper directors at the quarterly meeting held at midday. The dividend on Anaconda had been raised three times in the last year, from $3 to the present $7 annual rate, and in the interval shareholders had received rather valuable rights making for additional income.

RAISE BANK OF ENGLAND RATE.

London, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Directors of the Bank of England today raised the bank rate to 6½ per cent from the 5½ per cent level maintained since February, 1929. The rate a year ago was 4½.

The weekly statement, issued today, shows that the gold reserve decreased about 18 million dollars this week. The ratio of reserve to liabilities is 29.73 per cent, compared with 29.70 last week and 51.53 a year ago.

Paris, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes in francs: Gold increased 30 million; sight balances abroad decreased 10 million; bills discounted at home decreased 123 million; bills bought abroad increased 1 million; advances decreased 42 million; circulation decreased 152 million; current accounts decreased 42 million. Rate of discount 3½ per cent.

Dispatches from Stockholm state that the discount rate there has been raised from 4½ per cent to 5½ per cent. A dispatch from Oslo said that the rate in Norway had been raised to 6 per cent. National Bank of Denmark advanced its rate from 5 to 5½ per cent.

LUMBER ORDERS IN SLIGHT GAIN

New Orleans, Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Reports from 140 identical Southern Pine mills show orders received increased about 1 per cent over the previous week; shipments increased 1.08 per cent, and production decreased 1.19 per cent. These 140 mills show 65,139,000 feet ordered, 62,580,000 feet shipped and 63,211,000 feet produced, with orders on hand at end of last week amounting to 187,385,000 feet.

In the corresponding week of 1928 the same mills booked orders amounting to 74,695,000 feet; shipments were 71,915,000 feet; production, 68,248,000; orders on hand, 251,367,000 feet.

NO N. Y. BANK RATE CHANGE.

New York, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—Directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank made announcement after their weekly meeting today regarding the rediscount rate of 6 per cent.

Local Patronage.

Dr. Cutleigh, while visiting Winston-Salem, N. C., was lunching with several women at a prominent hotel when he took from his pocket a pack of cigarettes which were not the kind for which this city is known all over the world.

"What do you mean by smoking those cigarettes in Winston-Salem?" said one of the women. "Waiter, bring a package of our own."

With great dignity Dr. Cutleigh rose and removed his coat, vest, collar and tie. He was unbuttoning his shirt when one of the women gasped, "What in the world are you doing?"

"I am sorry to admit it but I find I'm not made here," he apologized. "Would you mind sending the waiter out for a suit of B. V. D.'s, a suit of local manufacture?"

Waiting thousands will read your want ad in The Star.

THE LATEST MARKET NEWS

NARROW BOND MOVEMENTS.

New York, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—In the bond market convertible issues fluctuated narrowly on an irregular trend. American Telephone 4½s lost more than 3 points and recovered. American I. G. Chemical 5½s again eased. Reading Coal & Iron 6s received some support in higher ground, but dealings were small.

Prime rail obligations firmed a shade.

Industrials and utilities showed unimportant changes from the previous close, although a few isolated instances of improvement appeared, notably in International Match 5s and United Biscuit 6s, which gained about a point each.

The subsidiaries of the Corporation will, upon completion of present financing of the Corporation and its subsidiaries, have outstanding in the hands of the public $175,958,100 of funded debt, $68,226,700 of preferred stock and 707,230 shares of no par value Class A Stock, such preferred stock being stated at par value or at $100 per share if without par value. After deducting interest, dividends on preferred stocks, depreciation and earnings applicable to Class A stocks, and to minority interests to be outstanding upon completion of present financing, the consolidated net income of the Corporation and its subsidiaries for such period is over three times the annual interest charges on these Debentures. After deducting from such net consolidated income the annual interest charges on these Debentures and annual dividend requirements on Preferred Stock of the Corporation now and presently to be outstanding, the balance is equal to over $3.50 per share per annum on the 235,000 shares of Common Stock of the Corporation now and presently to be outstanding.

The above earnings do not include any return to the Corporation on its majority interest in the common stock of Southern Natural Gas Corporation, the properties of which are expected to be in operation by January 1, 1930. Earnings applicable in the future to this common stock of Southern Natural Gas Corporation should considerably augment the earnings applicable to the Common Stock of Tri-Utilities Corporation. The above earnings include only eight months' earnings of Power, Gas and Water Securities Corporation and are based on the acceptance by the holders of all the outstanding common stock of Power, Gas and Water Securities Corporation of the offer to be made by Tri-Utilities Corporation for the acquisition thereof.

HISTORY AND BUSINESS

The business of Harnischfeger Corporation was started as a partnership in 1884 and incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin in January, 1910, as Pawling & Harnischfeger Company, the name being changed to the present designation in 1924.

The Company's business has been built around the task of supplying mechanical force and means to lift, carry, dig and convey materials. Its products include electric overhead cranes and hoists, material handling monorail systems, gasoline, Diesel and electric powered shovels, drag lines, cranes, trenching machines, backfillers, truck cranes, single line grab buckets, etc.

The Company is not only one of the leading manufacturers in its field but has always been a pioneer in developing new and improved labor saving devices in the material handling and conveying field. Among the developments in which the Company was the leader were the introduction of the gasoline shovel and the Diesel powered shovel, both of which were introduced successfully in a field previously dominated by the steam shovel.

The Company's line of overhead cranes and hoists include those designed for power house, foundry, machine shop and other industrial uses as well as bucket cranes and lumber cranes. Capacities range from ½ ton to 250 tons. In the excavation line shovel capacities are from ½ yard to 3½ cubic yards, the excavators being adaptable for use as drag lines, shovels, cranes, grab buckets, skimmer scoops, trench hoes, etc. The trench line includes trench digging machines, back fillers and tampers. Many new models which have been developed by the Company's extensive engineering and research departments are now being introduced.

The Company's products are sold under the trade name of "P. & H." and are in service throughout the United States and various other parts of the world.

CURB PRICES MOVED UP.

New York, Sept. 26.—(A. P.)—A wide assortment of curb exchange stocks were bid up substantially in the opening transactions today, as the rally which set in late yesterday was continued, but the upward movement was not uniform.

Electric Bond and Share mounted 2 points, and Electric Investors and American Superpower moved up about a point.

Insull Utility Investment, however, slipped back 1½ points and Niagara-Hudson ¼ point. Lone Star Gas opened a point higher.

The new Adams Express stock was admitted to trading on a when-issued basis, and opened at 68⅜, equal to about 684 on the old stock, which closed on the stock exchange last night at 630. Lehman Corporation rallied about a point. Haygart moved up more than a point on the announcement of the proposed merger with Adams Express and Railway and Express. Goldman-Sachs Trading declined more than a point. Glen Alden Coal opened about 4 points higher, and lost its gain.

Air stocks were again rather heavy. Curtiss Flying dropped more than 3 points to its low level of the year.

Cities service was turned over in large blocks and rose fractionally to new high ground.

Oils were irregular, but moved in narrow ranges.

NOTES OF THE GRAIN TRADE.

"Flour is showing a varied trend, with spring wheat mills in the Northwest reporting a decline, and sales at Buffalo showing an increase, while Southwestern bookings continued at only a slightly lower rate," said the Northwestern Miller. "Companies in the latter section showed sales representing 107 per cent of capacity, with bookings from 2,000 to 5,000 barrels for shipment up to January 1 typical. No very large buyers were reported in the market, but several 10,000-barrel sales were made. Inquiry for delivery after January 1 was slightly more active, but mills were reluctant to book for shipment that far ahead. Northwestern mills sold about 110 per cent of capacity, and expected a continuation of the present rate of buying, since a majority of medium sized dealers have not bought very far ahead. A strong millfeed situation is reported to have helped flour buying at Buffalo. Soft wheat flour sales continue small, but rather steady, being mostly small lots for quick shipment. Demand from export sources is generally dull."

The weekly Oklahoma crop bulletin said: "Harvesting of early corn is under way, and the crop is generally good. Late planted is maturing fast, but is generally poor. Much plowing was done during the week, and good progress was made in planting wheat, although the soil is rather dry in some sections. Early planted wheat is up to a good stand in the west and northwest portions. Grain sorghums are fair to good and are maturing."

A cable from Sydney, Australia, said: "The best informed government official in Western Australia said that the recent rains did not benefit the main wheat areas, which are fast deteriorating. The crop is privately estimated at 60 million bushels less than last year, which indicates a yield of about 100 million bushels.

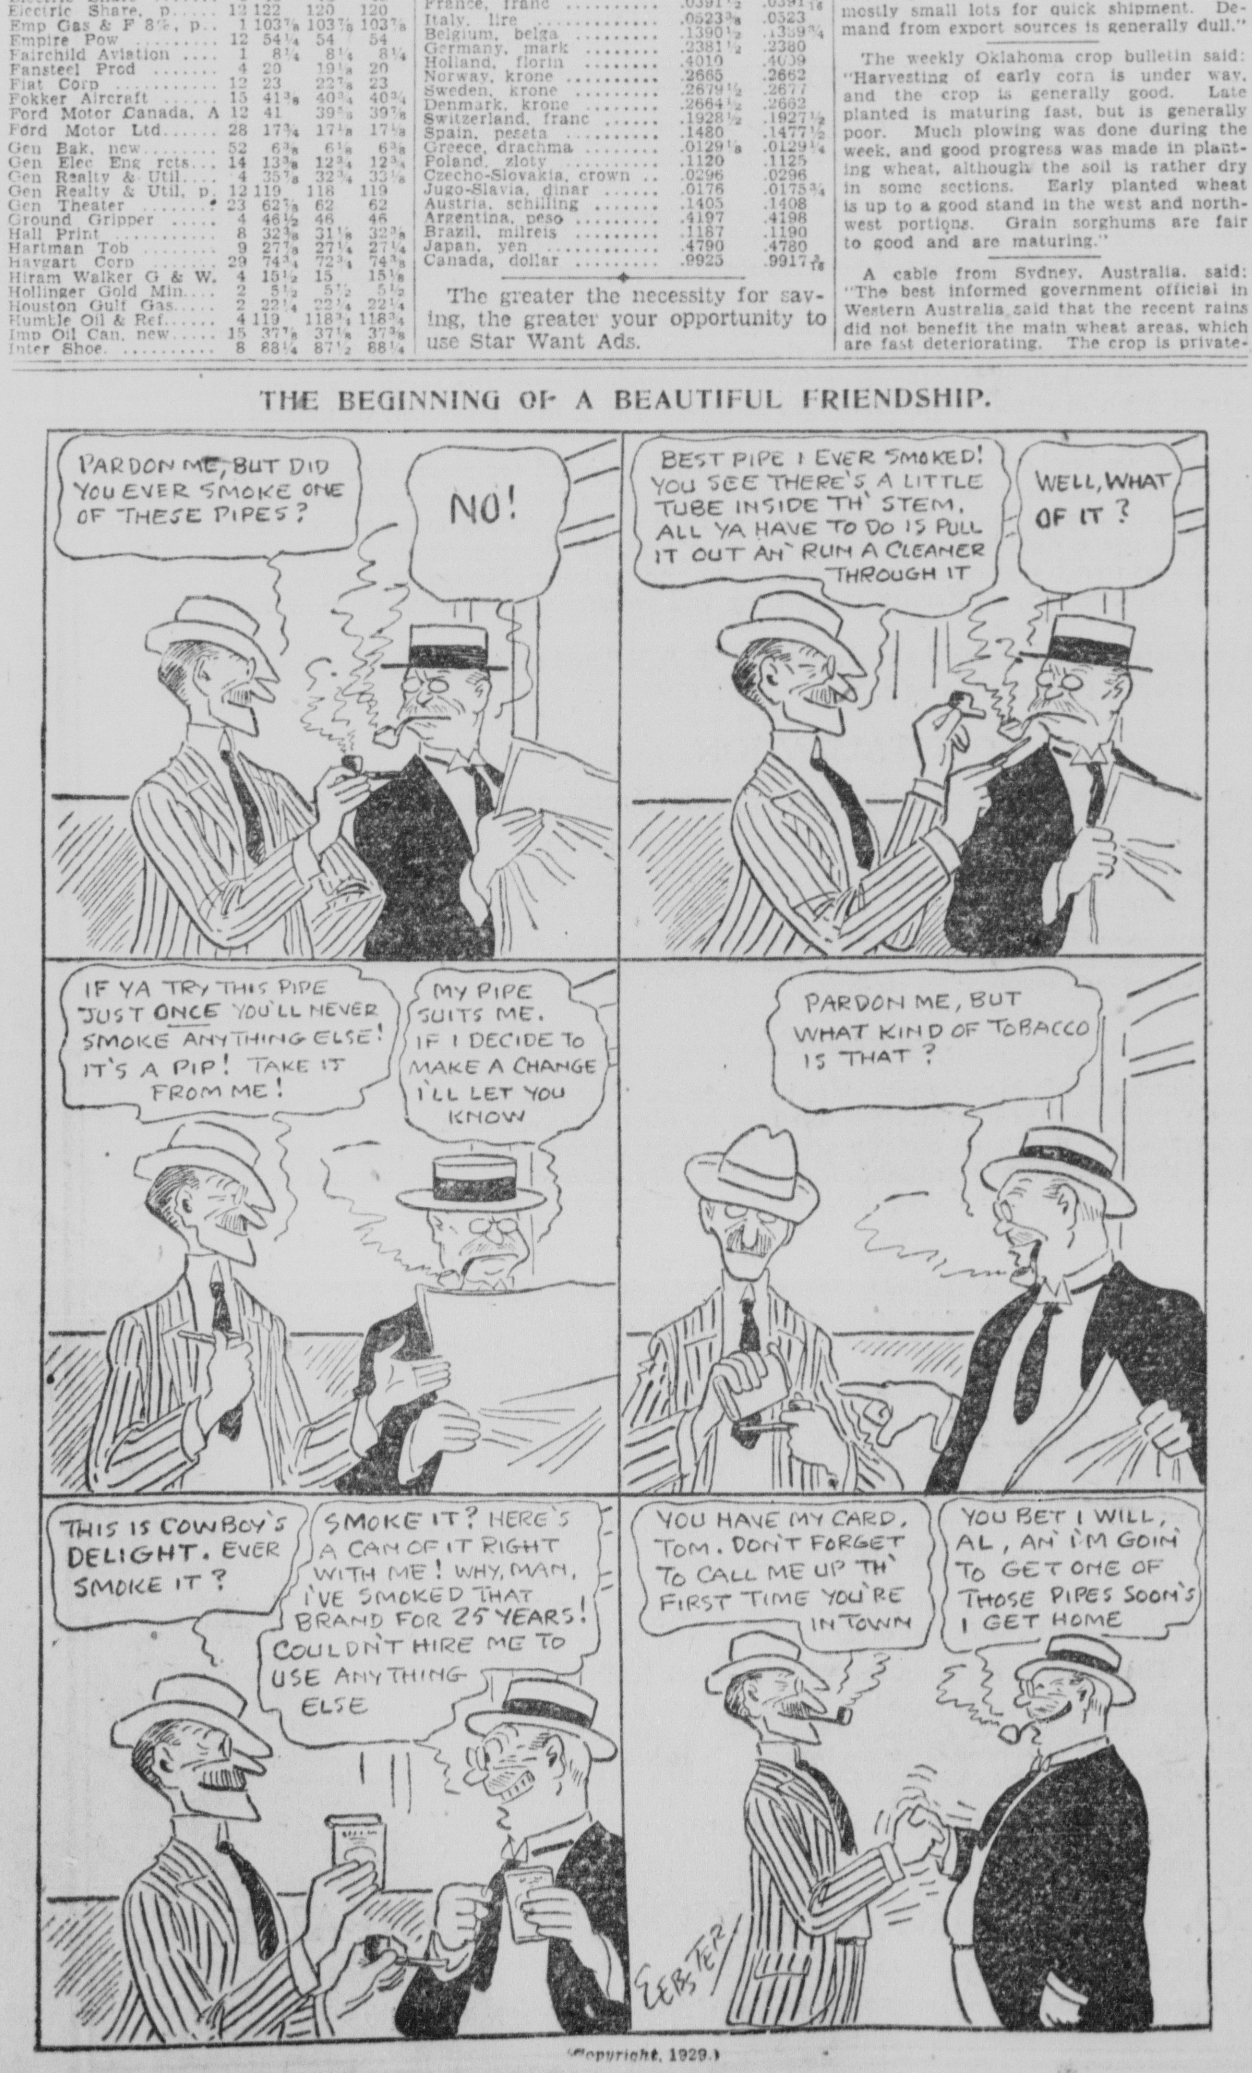
THE BEGINNING OF A BEAUTIFUL FRIENDSHIP.



PARDON ME, BUT DID YOU EVER SMOKE ONE OF THESE PIPES?
NO!
BEST PIPE I EVER SMOKED! YOU SEE THERE'S A LITTLE TUBE INSIDE TH' STEM. ALL YA HAVE TO DO IS PULL IT OUT AN' RUN A CLEANER THROUGH IT
WELL, WHAT OF IT?
IF YA TRY THIS PIPE JUST ONCE YOU'LL NEVER SMOKE ANYTHING ELSE! IT'S A PIP! TAKE IT FROM ME!
MY PIPE SUITS ME. IF I DECIDE TO MAKE A CHANGE I'LL LET YOU KNOW
PARDON ME, BUT WHAT KIND OF TOBACCO IS THAT?
THIS IS COWBOY'S DELIGHT. EVER SMOKE IT?
SMOKE IT? HERE'S A CAN OF IT RIGHT WITH ME! WHY, MAN, I'VE SMOKED THAT BRAND FOR 25 YEARS! COULDN'T HIRE ME TO USE ANYTHING ELSE
YOU HAVE MY CARD, TOM. DON'T FORGET TO CALL ME UP TH' FIRST TIME YOU'RE IN TOWN
YOU BET I WILL, AL, AN' I'M GOIN' TO GET ONE OF THOSE PIPES SOON'S I GET HOME

In Memoriam

IN loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Filumena La Salle, who passed away 8 years ago today.

What's a home without a mother,
All things this world may send,
But when we lost our darling mother,
We lost our dearest friend.
She wore the crown of patience
Through the years of struggling on,
Those hands that rest forever
Were the hands that made our home.

—Sadly missed by husband, children, mother, sisters and brothers.

IN loving memory of Hascal C. Weaver, who passed away 4 years ago today. Sadly missed by wife and children, mother and brother.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY—THE IDEA!

(Copyright, 1929.)

THE COLONEL HAS BEEN VERY RESTLESS SINCE HE WAS PUT IN BED TO REST, BUT MRS. BUNGLE REMAINS FIRM IN HER INTENTION TO MAKE HER HUSBAND FORGET HIS LATEST ATTACK OF SPECULATOR'S FEVER.
WE'RE FROM THE LODGE. WE HEARD OLD GEORGE WAS FLAT ON HIS BACK. IS IT SERIOUS?
WE SEE A LOT OF THAT. WE'RE THE SICK COMMITTEE. WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE, SISTER BUNGLE.
WE BROUGHT FLOWERS - ROSES. AND I GUESS IT DON'T MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE IF WE GO IN AND TRY TO CHEER HIM UP A LITTLE.
GEORGE ISN'T REALLY ILL. HE JUST NEEDS A REST. AHEM, PLEASE DO NOT SAY ANYTHING TO HIM ABOUT THE STOCK MARKET. WE'RE TRYING TO KEEP HIS MIND OFF OF THAT SUBJECT.
YES I FEEL GREAT I'LL BE UP TOMORROW. BY THE WAY GUS, YOU WERE INTERESTED IN THE MARKET, HOW IS—?
MARKET? WHADDYE MEAN BY THE MARKET, GEORGE?
NONE OF US KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN, GEORGE.
MARKET? DO YOU MEAN MEAT MARKET?
THE IDEAR OF HIM THREATENING ME BECAUSE I TOLD HIM I DIDN'T KNOW NOTHING ABOUT THE MARKET.
I NEVER SAW HIM GET SO EXCITED. EVEN WHEN HE WAS TRYING TO PUT OVER A FAST ONE IN A LODGE MEETING.
THE IDEA OF HIS WIFE PRACTICALLY PUTTING US OUT AND SAYING WE WERE TRYING TO START AN ARGUMENT WITH HIM.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26.

So Shearer Buncoed Big Business.

There are aspects of the case of our Mr. Shearer that tend to discredit one of our most acclaimed American institutions. We had always supposed big business to be exceedingly smart. It is disheartening to find it such an easy mark as it was to Mr. Shearer.

Those steel makers and ship builders are revealed to be so singularly childlike. We do not know that we care to ride on their ships any more. We are not sure that they know how to build a ship. How do we know they have not paid some charming stranger $25,000 for the idea of a ship without any bottom? The thing evokes fearful apprehensions. Are they the Napoleonic executives we had supposed, sitting behind their guarded doors and pressing miraculous buttons? Or are they in there cutting out paper dolls? Mr. Shearer went in there and by all accounts came out with their money. He just happened to be going by and remembered they were great executives.

"Let me see," he mused. "Shall I sell them the Brooklyn bridge? No, they've probably bought it already. I could be the Spanish prisoner with a buried treasure, I suppose. Could they have heard about him, I wonder? Probably not, they're great executives. Still, that takes time and I'm in a hurry this morning. I don't want to spend more than ten minutes on a little job like this."

It was enough. They cried with pleasure when Mr. Shearer told them his plan. It had been so long, you see, since they had had an idea. Necessarily, for they were great executives.

"No," said Mr. Shearer, gently freeing himself from their embraces, "I do not want your watches. Take them back. I'm a busy man. I have to go and sell an idea to stand the Panama Canal on end, freeze it into an icicle and thus lower the temperature of the South Atlantic so that bananas won't spoil. Just give me $25,000 and I will go to Geneva and see a man who knows a man."

The executives recognized instantly that this was the way big things were done. They had read about it in magazines. They had read that this was the way they did big things. They couldn't quite recall the fact themselves but they were bound to believe what they read in their own publicity, especially after they had paid for it.

Mr. Shearer got his money. Mr. Shearer went to Geneva. But beyond seeing a man who knew a man it does not appear he did anything there. This ought not to surprise anybody except children and executives. Obviously it could not have surprised Mr. Shearer. He knew when his job was done. It was done when he sold his idea. But with the coming out of the facts it cannot be said he has done much service to the American go-getting fraternity. He has rather shown it up. The facts about the failure of the Geneva conference were known long ago, and the result fully accounted for without Mr. Shearer. Now, unfortunately for the sellers of soap bubbles, it is revealed he was there to do something to support the claims of the American go-get-and-go-fix-it industry, and didn't do it.

But these results, tragic as they are for big business and its hangers-on, are all to the good otherwise. They will stir the government to a new alertness in keeping the public interests free from the designs of private ones that are always trying to use the national need for their own profit. They will help to discount much of the blurb about the Napoleonic intellects that function behind the guarded doors of big business. And they will utterly blast, for this selling season anyway, the glittering pretensions of the brisk fraternity to which Mr. Shearer belongs, which has played toady to American capital's booby for so many painful years.

New York Is Offered a Good Thing.

In the coming municipal election the voters of New York will have to make a hard choice. The difficulties are such that, were it not for the fact the voters through long experience have become callous, selecting the officials to run the city would be quite impossible, that is, without assistance. Help is offered in the crisis but, as likely as not, it will be rejected. That indicates just how hardened the voters are.

The assistance, although not labeled as such, might be had through the Socialist candidate for mayor, Norman Thomas. The two major parties, headed by Mayor Walker and Mr. LaGuardia, are merely in a racketeering game, Mr. Thomas feels. The present city administration has failed miserably in its transit and housing programs, the Socialist candidate says, and the Republicans, with Mr. LaGuardia, would do no better. But there is a way to handle the transit situation, and that is to get the system municipally owned. That would give Tammany a real chance to show what it could do in running a big business, although that is not part of the argument for municipal ownership advanced by Mr. Thomas.

But the principle holds in all cases; if things are to be done properly they must be done wholly by the city, which has failed to date in most of the things it has attempted. That means there should be municipal housing, too, with rentals at cost. Then, although Mr. Thomas does not mention it, the people ought to be allowed to buy at municipally owned grocery stores and at shops of other kinds similarly controlled.

There seems to be no good reason why New York should not have an ideal city government, together with ideal living conditions. If the voters would wake up to the possibility something could be done. But the chances are all against it. Voters are that way.

An Important Week-end.

In the detailed program of Ramsay MacDonald's activities during his impending visit to Washington, as made public by the state department, there is one rather noticeable blank. From 2:30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, when the prime minister and his daughter will go to stay at the White House, until 1 o'clock, the following Monday morning, when they will lunch at the White House, the schedule contains no indication as to how they will spend their time.

The only comment under the heading of "Sunday, October 6" consists of the simple statement that the MacDonalds will be the guests of the Hoovers. It scarcely requires a clairvoyant, however, to see that if the prime minister and the President expect to discuss naval armaments, most of the talking will have to be done in this brief week-end rest between social engagements. Under the circumstances we trust that the "Wee Free Kirk" in Scotland will not feel it necessary to censure Mr. MacDonald for desecrating the Sabbath, as it did on the occasion of one of the prime minister's preliminary conversations with General Dawes on the same subject.

Poor Watson!

A few days ago Senator Watson made this statement, prompted by the nagging of Senator Pat Harrison: "On many occasions I have said to the President: 'I think you ought to keep out of this tariff controversy while it is pending in the senate of the United States.' So far as I have any influence on the President of the United States, he will not engage in this controversy."

And then came President Hoover's statement about the flexible tariff. The lesson seems to be that you can give all the advice to a President that you want to, but it is just as well not to tell about it publicly and suggest that so far as you have influence he will do thus and so.

Because you may find yourself out on a limb that has been sawed off without your knowing anything about it.

Miller Huggins, the Great.

The death of Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, removes from big league baseball one of its most notable, yet most mysterious, personal figures. In his own playing days he was rated one of the smartest and most colorful of second basemen. Yet it was his fate, when he became manager of the Yankees, to find his own colorful personality apparently submerged as he strove to guide and control the most willful, highly paid and extravagantly pampered group of temperamental performers ever gathered together in the history of professional baseball.

His early griefs and failures as manager of his galaxy of recalcitrant stars are well remembered; but the manner in which he eventually harnessed his talent and welded it into the most powerful scoring unit baseball has known is still a mystery. The story of his success will be written by those who knew him more closely than the public has ever known him; and the details of his early tribulations will fade from memory. Which is as it should be, for if ever a man achieved a purpose in the face of public criticism, personal ill favor and scant co-operation from subordinates, it was Miller Huggins.

He gave to his club all he had—so much that, when illness struck him at 49, he had nothing more to give. But he had won his fight, and with it the love of his players, the respect of his critics, and the esteem of all fandom as a great manager and a great sportsman.

The King's English.

Donald Barr Chidsey in "Marlborough."

As she (Catherine, the Portuguese wife of Charles II of England) spoke no English and Charles no Portuguese, they had to get along as best they could in Spanish. They quarreled considerably at first, and he was unfaithful to her from the beginning. But her innocence and virtue (extraordinary attributes in those days at the English court) fascinated the king. Sometimes he would undertake to give her lessons in English, teaching her obscene words and phrases which she would repeat, ignorant of their meaning, before her ladies, to delight the frolicsome Charles.

A Receptive Mood.

"What did you say to the traffic officer?" "Nothing," answered Mr. Chuggins. "When a traffic cop starts a talk, I'm no orator. I'm just a good listener."

HENRY GEORGE'S LOVE FOR HUMANITY INSPIRED "PROGRESS AND POVERTY"

His Masterpiece, the Fiftieth Anniversary of Which Was Celebrated in Pittsburgh This Week, Was Written While He Was a Poor San Francisco Printer—The Book Had Its Influence on Our Economic Life, But It Is Even Greater as a Statement of a Beautiful Social Philosophy.

ON the front page of The Star of October 29, 1897, there appeared this headline, three columns wide and an inch tall—AN HONEST MAN IS DEAD. The story was nearly ten columns long, occupying all of page 1 and half of page 2. Henry George, the fiftieth anniversary of whose book, "Progress and Poverty" was observed in Edinburgh last month and in Pittsburgh, September 22, 23 and 24, had died in New York in the midst of a mayoralty campaign in which he had overtaxed his powers—a relentless foe of organized political corruption exemplified by Tammany.

The gravity of even so sad an event as death is not felt after thirty-two years, and one now can see in the unique headline, not merely a tribute to one man's integrity, but a whimsical thrust at human frailty. But, although the courageous honesty of Henry George called for inch-high type, there were other reasons why the report of his death was so significant as to crowd all other news into the back pages. Here was a spectacular story of humble beginning and high achievement, a picture of fervid devotion to principle, love of humanity and hatred of oppression. An economist, the originator of "the single tax," was dead, but other and greater economists had died before him without being widely mourned. Thousands were sad that day because, although they didn't word it that way, one of the world's greatest social philosophers had fallen in battle.

MILLIONS OF COPIES SOLD.

Of his theory of taxation there was little or no thought. Those who had heard his pleas or had read "Progress and Poverty" (more than 3 million copies had been sold) were recalling the spirit, if not the words themselves, of such passages as this:

"I do not wish to call upon those my voice may reach to demand their own rights, so much as to call upon them to secure the rights of others more helpless. I believe that the idea of duty is more potent for social improvement than the idea of interest; that in sympathy is a stronger social force than in selfishness. I believe that any great social improvement must spring from, and be animated by, that spirit which seeks to make life better, nobler, happier for others, rather than by that spirit which only seeks more enjoyment for itself. For the Mammon of Injustice can always buy the selfish whenever it may think it worth while to pay enough; but unselfishness it cannot buy."

The name of Henry George was little known, when a half century ago, as a poor San Francisco printer, he launched his book bearing the paradoxical title, "Progress and Poverty," on the sea of books. ("Launched" is an apt word, for Henry George had been a sailor, setting out to sea at the age of 14 with his father's blessing.)

ONLY FORTY-EIGHT PAGES AT FIRST.

"His alma mater," says Henry George, jr., "had been the forecastle and the printing office." Returning to San Francisco after a venture in New York, George was impressed by the effort to "corner" land in the rising young metropolis of the West. The idea that those who had a monopoly of the land would practically own those who had to use the land took form in his mind. Filled with these ideas he wrote, in 1871, a little book, "Our Land and Land Policy." It was a 48-page advocacy of the destruction of land monopoly by shifting all taxes from labor and the products of labor and concentrating them in one tax on the value of land, regardless of improvements. The book had a circulation of 1,000, which wasn't the kind of audience George sought. He set about to do the work thoroughly. Six years later, he started the writing of "Progress and Poverty," which was described as "an inquiry into industrial depressions and increase of want with increase of wealth."

"The book," says his son in a preface to the fiftieth anniversary edition, "was finished after a year and seven months of intense labor, and the undergoing of privations which caused the family to do without a parlor carpet, and which frequently forced the author to pawn his personal effects. And when the last page was written, in the dead of night, when he was entirely alone, Henry George flung himself upon his knees and wept like a child. He had kept his vow. The rest was in the Master's hands."

Then came the search for a publisher. Some thought the book visionary, others, revolutionary, and besides, they didn't think it would sell. D. Appleton & Co. finally agreed to publish the book if the author would pay for making the plates. So, George had the type set in a friend's printing office, setting the first two "sticks" himself. Before the plates were sent East an author's proof edition of 500 copies was struck off. Appletons brought out the first market edition in 1880, and a prophecy of recognition was fulfilled. It outsold the most popular novels of the day and was run serially in newspapers.

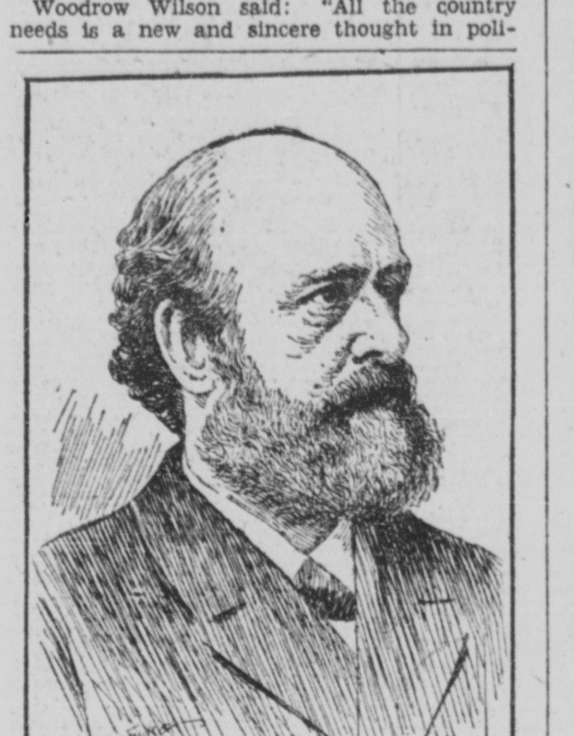
THE BOOK BORE FRUIT.

Of the book's influence on American life there can be little doubt. His plan of taxation, as a formula to correct all social ills, still has many advocates. They are men and women fired by something of the visionary zeal of the great reformer who would carry on his dream to fulfillment. But whether this is possible, when the fact remains that Henry George's theory of taxation has greatly influenced our economic and political structure. One instance of application of the principle of "single tax" is the American "improvement" district, in which the property benefited by a park or boulevard is taxed in direct proportion to the advantages derived. This, in truth, is a direct tax on unearned increment represented in real or potential increase in value. In Australia and New Zealand, especially the latter, the book had a powerful influence, their tax systems being primarily levies on unearned values in lands.

Let us see what men recognized for soundness of economic philosophy think of the proposals which publishers fifty years ago considered too revolutionary. Theodore Roosevelt said:

"The burden of municipal taxation should be so shifted as to put the weight of land taxation upon the unearned rise in value of the land itself, rather than upon the improvements." (The Roosevelt statement is not acceptance of "single tax," but adaptation of it. Where George would put the entire burden of taxation upon the unearned rise in land values, Roosevelt would put only real estate tax upon it.)

Woodrow Wilson said: "All the country needs is a new and sincere thought in politics, coherently, distinctly, and boldly uttered by men who are sure of their ground. The power of men like Henry George seems to me to mean that." (Mr. Wilson implies, if he does not say plainly, that although Henry George might have overstepped in his enthusiasm, he was on firm ground.)



HENRY GEORGE, ORIGINATOR OF THE SINGLE TAX IDEA.

As an economist, Henry George attacked the Malthusian theory—that it is the tendency of population to increase faster than the food supply. He discredited several theories of the relation of capital and labor. He showed there was a definite relationship between poverty and the percentage of the products of labor and capital taken by owners of land of high unearned values.

HIS CONCERN FOR "IMPONDERABLES."

John Dewey, who would not detract from the merit of George's proposal to change the methods of distributing the burdens of taxation, does seem to put a stronger emphasis upon George's concern for the "ideal factors of life, upon what are sometimes called the imponderables."

"Henry George," he continues, "puts even greater stress upon the fact that community life increases land values because it opens a wider, fuller and more varied life, so that the desire to share in the higher values which the community brings with it is a decisive factor in raising the rental value of land. And it is because the present system not only depresses the material status of the mass of the population, but especially because it renders 1-sided and inequitable the people's share in these higher values that we find in 'Progress and Poverty' the analysis of the scientist combined with the sympathies and aspirations of a great lover of mankind."

It is not our purpose to weigh the merits of the broad economic changes proposed by George. Much that is good has come as the result of his teachings. Perhaps more is to come. A great measure of the truth that is in "Progress and Poverty" has been accepted as commonplace. Those things which startled the world a half century ago are facts of our existence. To his most zealous followers he remains the prophet of an entirely new economic order. That he may or may not be. But we do know him as the prophet of a new social order. After economic theories are forgotten, after new political structures have taken the place of those we now have, the social philosophy of Henry George will live. As a mark of his greatness, we would not turn to his theory of taxation, but to such words as these:

"In the idea of incarnation—of God voluntarily descending to the help of men, which is embodied not merely in Christianity, but in other great religions—lies, I sometimes think, a deeper truth than perhaps even the churches teach. This is certain, that the deliverers, the liberators, the advancers of humanity, have always been those who were moved by the sight of injustice and misery rather than those spurred by their own suffering.

"As it was a Moses, learned in all the lore of the Egyptians, and free to the court of Pharaoh, and not a tasked slave, forced to make bricks without straw, who led the Children of Israel from the house of bondage; as it was the Gracchi, of partician blood and fortune, who struggled to the death against the land-grabbing system which finally destroyed Rome, as it must, should it go on, destroy this republic, so has it always been that the oppressed, the degraded, the downtrodden have been freed and elevated rather by the efforts and sacrifices of those to whom fortune has been more kind than by their own strength. For the more fully men have been deprived of their natural rights, the less their power to regain them. The more men need help, the less they can help themselves."

Thus a poor young printer of San Francisco appealed to the best that was in men of power and wealth. Thus he probably won immortality—as a social philosopher, as one who was "moved by the sight of injustice." L. C. M.

The Influence of the Table.

Theodore Roosevelt in "All in the Family."

One of the greatest institutions of the civilized world is the family dining table. In literature and fable, writers have dwelt long and lovingly on the hearth. No doubt the hearth is important, but for influence the table has it far outdistanced. To begin with, the hearth is used only in winter when it is cold, while the table takes no account of weather. Then the hearth serves as a point of assembly but once a day, in the evening, while the table is used three times. Last and most important, the hearth holds only fire while the table holds food.

KANSAS NOTES.

"An Atchison girl is engaged to a young man who makes only $8 a week," says the Globe, "but her parents do not seem greatly alarmed."

John Newman is skeptical about Ben Mickel's hay story in which Ben says he and his brother put up 125 tons of hay in Western Kansas one summer, says the Holton Recorder. Ben came from Rooks County, pretty well to the West. Now John asserts there haven't been 125 tons of prairie hay west of the Blue River since Coronado crossed the plains of Kansas in search of Quivera.

"What," demands the Atchison Globe, "has become of the old-fashioned man who committed suicide by hanging himself to a jack-oak tree?"

And Charley Mann of the Osborne Farmer, ever ready to aid a brother in distress, answers: "We don't know, but we imagine they buried him somewhere."

And here's a pertinent thought from the Hiawatha World: "If all the folks who wrote their regrets over the demise of the Youths' Companion in Kansas and elsewhere, had subscribed for the paper, it would still be alive, and kicking."

HOLD EVERYTHING!

Martial law has been declared in Borger, Tex., the scene of recent lawlessness, according to a dispatch in The Kansas City Star. Bad business, is our comment. More battles have been caused by that kind of law than were ever prevented.—University Kansan.

Betimes we have said in this column Americans were easily amused, says Hugh Powell in the Coffeyville Journal. And that we pioneered in that thought is borne out by the fact that all such prognostications of ours were duly made prior to the advent of the "dog with fleas" marathon. Yes, sir, there is such a thing. At Belle Plaine, Ia., a purse of $100 is to be awarded to the owner of the dog with the most fleas! We hereby withdraw all disparaging and more or less distended remarks we have made against rocking chair marathons, hog calling, husband calling, terrapin races, bunion derbies, et cetera, level both our index fingers in the general direction of Belle Plaine, Ia., and dast the world to beat the idea of the "dog with fleas" contest.

"Imagine," said an Ottawa man to the Herald, "they wouldn't sell me an overcoat in that clothing store until I had paid for my summer underwear."

There is a distinction, with considerable difference, believes the Ottawa Herald, in the use of "best" families with reference to the prize winners in the "fitter families" contest of the Topeka fair, and the same term to describe the families whom Mr. House first said and later denied, served liquor.

An earth tremor that rattled dishes and windows was reported from Manhattan and Junction City early yesterday and the needle on the University of Kansas seismograph gave corroboration by deviating slightly from the straight line it writes when the earth is at rest. Perhaps the people of Kansas are going to have all the advantages of travel in California without stirring away from home, says the Lawrence Journal.

THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

Editorial Opinion of the Manchester Guardian.

There is probably no Englishman, however pacific, whose blood, at some time of his life, has not thrilled to the splendid arrogance of Thompson's operatic poem. But "Rule, Britannia!" must be read now with a difference, a rational and liberal but no pusillanimous difference. The British navy must still be formidable, but it can no longer be arrogant, nor should it be. Professor Laski, in his speech to the Manchester Luncheon Club, has done a service by calmly drawing attention to the fact that the United States doctrine of the freedom of the seas, which is also the doctrine of the other civilized nations, must now in one form or other supersede our own. Indeed, it must do so in our own insular interest.

He did well to point out, too, that at least twice (it must have been oftener) during the Great War we were perilously near war with the United States. Fortunately for us, Germany in the pursuit of a misguided realism offended more deeply and unpardonably by her submarine war, and the United States came into the war not on our side but against Germany. The American doctrine of the freedom of the seas asserts the right of neutrals to trade with all nations, neutral or combatant.

An American observer during the Great War is reported to have said: "Well, you are making new international law every day, but I agree that it is very good law."

We did, indeed, stretch the law of blockade, contraband, and the right of search farther than it had ever been stretched since our last war with America in 1812. Mr. Asquith announced this to the world beforehand upon the bare announcement of the German submarine blockade, and the world listened. "We will not," he said, "allow ourselves to be entangled in a network of juridical niceties." Nor did we. None the less our permanent interest is quite other. Of all nations we are most dependent on the freedom of the seas—of the right, that is, of neutral nations by their shipping to feed the people and the factories of this island nation if we are attacked and our supplies threatened. Interest and sentiment alike urge us to accept the American doctrine, which clearly also is in the interest of the world.

OUR STRENGTH IS POLITICAL.

Norman Angell in the Spectator, London.

The undoubted superiority of America and its economic predominance today are not to be explained by superiority of natural resources, but by a political fact (which gives rise, be it noted, to an economic one). The states have political unity; Europe has not.

If the course of historical development in North America had been more like that of South America, so that English-speaking America had been as much divided as is Spanish-speaking America; if, in what is now the United States, there existed, not one nation, but a dozen rival nations—as south of the Mexican border there are more than a dozen different nations—we should not now be talking about American power and its predominance in the world. North America would figure for very little more in such terms than does South America.

But the physical conditions would be precisely the same—the same soil and air and water and raw materials of wealth. They would, however, because of a purely political fact, be exploited in an entirely different way. Large scale industry, as we know it in America, would not exist.

If Henry Ford had had to drive his car, not over indifferent country roads, but over a dozen hostile tariff barriers, into states, each one of which was determined to have its own patriotic 100 per cent Henry Ford, and if Massachusetts had always been talking of the competition of its trade with that of Pennsylvania or Michigan—well, of course, there would have been no Henry Fords.

And as the sun went down I heard,
High on a chestnut limb,
The song of an unseen, nameless bird
And bowed my head to him.

SYNOPSIS.

Benny Darrell and his wife, Flo Sloane, after many lean seasons in "three-a-day" houses, become Broadway favorites. Flo loses her head completely. She is immensely flattered by the attentions she receives from Alexander Winston, a society butterfly, and Gus LeGrand, a night club owner. She takes a country place and has it decorated by Lady Margaret Thrace, through whom she hopes to meet the right people. A call from Rita Eliot and Henry Henry, members of an ultra-fashionable set, makes her feel that her ambition is in a fair way to be realized. She begs Lady Margaret to get them to stay to dinner. The only drawback is Benny, who insists on being himself. Flo lectures him on his lack of social grace. To her horror, Lew Lewis and Peggy Page, friends of their vaudeville days, drop in. Winston lets Flo know he sympathizes with her embarrassment, and she devotes herself to him. He makes love to her. When Benny orders him out of the house, Flo says she is through and leaves Benny the same night. LeGrand has promised to do great things for Flo, name a new night club for her and install her as central attraction, dancing with a handsome Mexican partner. LeGrand convinces her that a divorce will be to her advantage. He promises to arrange everything. His lawyers put the situation up to Benny, who agrees to furnish "the evidence," although doing so means besmirching his character. Rita Eliot learns of the situation and hurries to Benny's hotel, where Benny and a professional co-respondent await the arrival of the detectives in the pay of Flo's lawyers. She is just in time to thwart the scheme. Meanwhile all preparations have been made for the opening of LeGrand's new club.

LIGHTS were low, and a famous band played softly beside the polished square of dance floor. (Later on, as the club became established, Gus LeGrand would replace it with a cheaper band, though there would be no announcement of the change. Gus LeGrande was no fool.)

If he was no fool, neither was he much of an interior decorator. He took great pride in planning the decorations of his night clubs himself, and this one was "done" in tones of baby-blue and orange, a color scheme which required little imagination. Flo had been enthusiastic over it, but tonight, as LeGrand stood in the entrance, looking over the crowd, he realized that the decorations were too cold for a night club. And the discovery did not add to his good humor.

All day he had been in a mood of seething fury. To begin with, the failure of Kogel's detectives—and the consequent collapse of Flo's divorce—had put him in a rage.

Over the telephone he cursed Kogel vilely, whereupon Kogel replied, not without a certain infuriating dignity, that after this LeGrand could do his own dirty work. Everything, it seemed, had gone wrong during the day, and, on top of it all, Flo had quarreled violently with Cuervo, her new dancing partner. LeGrand had just left them wrangling back stage. Their dance was to go on in a few minutes.

Something seemed missing tonight. As he watched the crowd he sensed the absence of that spirited gaiety which had made such a tumultuous success of the Club Bon Bon, the night he opened it, to present Darrell and Sloane for the firse time. LeGrand scowled. He had spent a fortune furnishing this place and exploiting Flo as a star. . . .

He looked at his watch. Time for their dance. Swinging on his heel, he walked back through a narrow passage, to her dressing room.

CHAPTER XXII.

At an inconspicuous table on the balcony of the Club Fleurette, unnoticed in the crowd, for the lights were dim, sat Benny, with Lew and Peggy Page. Benny was silent, sipping ginger ale slowly. He had never cared for liquor, though tonight it might have eased the aching loneliness he felt.

Observing his friend's gloomy mien Lew said: "I told ya not t' come here."

"All it needs," said Lew, "is a nickel piano."

B. B. Hummel breezed up to their table, wearing an immense white carnation in the lapel of his varsity-cut dinner jacket.

Benny said hello, and would have asked Hummel to sit down, but Lew impolitely lifted his leg across the vacant chair. Lew had never been delicate in expressing his predjudices.

"Well," Hummel continued, unabashed by the song writer's lack of cordiality. "Gus has certainly laid himself out with this new place, ain't he?"

"If he was laid out in it," said Lew, "with a large floral wreath, I'd like it better."

And Lew replied: "He'd climb a tree, if anybody crackled a peanut!"

"By the way, Benny," said Hummel, hastily changing the subject. "I just seen some of your society friends downstairs—this here now Lady what's-her-name, an' Miss Eliot, an' that Henry Henry an' Winston, the polo player. They're parked at a ring-side table."

"Yeh?" Benny did not look up. He had been thinking of Rita Eliot all day.

"Well"—Hummel gave a jaunty twist to his mustache—"the big show comes on in a minute. Am I right? See y' all later." And he passed along to another table.

"You weren't very nice to him," Peggy reproved Lew.

Lew sighed. "That ape's feelin's are so hard t' hurt, I give it up. Every time ya insult him ya gotta hand him a blue print t' go with it!"

In the elaborate salon off her dressing room Flo, costumed and made up for her opening dance number, confronted LeGrand almost tearfully. At one side stood Ramon Cuervo, a sleek, handsome, patent-leather haired young man in evening clothes of an extreme fashion. He was the new dancing partner.

"I tell you," exclaimed Flo angrily, "I can't work with him, that's all there is to it!"

"Now, now," comforted LeGrand clumsily, "pull yourself together. In two minutes you got to be out on the floor."

"He don't help me—all he's trying to do is put himself over!" she cried. "In our fast one-step he holds me all wrong for the whirls—I'm afraid I'll fall! It's an outrage, that's what it is!"

"How about this, Cuervo?" demanded LeGrand. "You know what you're here for—to do like Miss Sloane wants you to do. She's the star."

"He acts like he was the star!" flashed Flo.

The sleek young man merely shrugged his tailored shoulders. "Nothing I do please 'er. She don't know w'at she want."

"If you look out at the crowd tonight—with that silly grin of yours—instead of watching me on those whirls—"

Flo turned and dabbed at her nose with a powder puff. Then she swept haughtily past her dancing partner, the tulle panniers of her flame-colored gown like an aura around her.

"The best of luck!" called LeGrand.

From their table in the darkened balcony Benny leaned forward, gripping his knees, intently watching the couple on the floor below. In a dazzling circle of spotlight they moved with languorous grace through a tango.

Benny's technical eye recognized the tango—it was an old step that he had invented, that he and Flo had used last season at the Club Bon Bon. Her new partner, he observed, was at home in a tango. Well, he was a Mexican. But there was nothing particularly interesting in their dancing.

Benny found himself fluttering a handkerchief across his damp brow. He was very nervous. Flo had received a big hand when she made her entrance—that was natural; but at the finish of the tango the applause was not deafening. Benny stirred nervously. Perhaps the next one would get them . . . .

The next one proved to be a "butterfly waltz"—also of Benny's invention. It did not thrill the opening-night patrons, many of whom were by this time in wine.

Here and there bursts of conversation rose above the music. People were not paying attention.

"Listen," whispered Lew audibly. "They're about as exciting as Jap acrobats closing the bill!"

Benny was silent, worried. There was less applause than before. It looked as if Flo would be a flop. While she was changing her gown, Ramon Cuervo came in on one of those absurd skipping solo numbers, such as male dancers invariably perform while their partners are changing their costumes.

Cuervo was a competent hoofer, and handsome enough, but his personality threw off no sparks of magnetism.

When they came on for their final dance, Flo's billowy cloth-of-gold picture dress brought spontaneous applause. She looked so radiantly beautiful that Benny's heart felt a stab of pain. Yet he leaned forward, his eyes brightening. Perhaps she could win them back with this number. The music swung into the quick stirring "Paris." The spotlight upon them, Flo, in Cuervo's arms, floated out into the intricacies of a fleet one-step that Benny had devised two seasons ago.

CHAPTER XXIII.

As Flo and Cuervo, her new dancing partner, whirled the length of the floor, Cuervo smiled at the crowd. Benny noticed that he seemed more intent on registering his own steps than in guiding Flo. Benny felt uneasy. Those whirls were dangerous. . . .

They spun round and round to the swelling crescendo of the music, then of a sudden Flo slipped and fell. Benny lurched to his feet. An exclamation from the crowd. She was up again in an instant, and clinging to Cuervo's hand as they took their bows. But the whole performance had been ruined. And as she left the floor, Benny noticed that she limped. He sat down again slowly.

"Too bad," Peggy Page said.

"It was his fault," muttered Benny.

Around them people had resumed drinking, eating, and laughing as if nothing had happened.

"Those looked to me like all your old steps." Peggy rattled the ice in her empty glass: a well-rehearsed cue for Lew to bring forth his flask.

"No," lied Benny loyally. "That was all her own stuff."

"Well," declared Lew, "they better change their act, or the customers'll keep away from this joint like there was a scarlet-fever sign on the front door."

Benny sat silent for a while. Perhaps he had never loved Flo so much as in this hour of her failure. And the disturbing thought came to him that he could be of service to her. She needed him. Even if it was all over between them, he might be able to give her a few suggestions, help her with some new steps.

Lew picked up a large menu card. "How about some groceries?"

Benny rose with a sudden decision. "I'm on my way," he said. "See ya both tomorrow. G'night." And he left them and made his way out through the crowded tables.

"There goes a guy," sighed Lew, "that made the big mistake of bein' in love with his own wife. . . ."

One o'clock. Flo was sitting before the lighted mirrors of her dressing-table, removing the last traces of her make-up. The doctor had just departed, after bandaging her ankle. It was, he explained, a strained ligament: nothing particularly serious, but she must be careful of it for a few days.

Flo was still furious over the accident—and had so expressed herself, in no uncertain terms, to Ramon Cuervo. It had hurt her pride more than her ankle, yet she resented the bandage, which, thin as it was, showed through her sheer stocking. Annoying that it should have happened tonight, for she was to meet Alec Winston as soon as he could decently get away from his party.

The neat colored maid, hired by LeGrand to attend Flo in her dressing-room, stood by, holding the black lace evening frock she was to wear. All about the dressing-room were baskets of flowers. Florally, tonight's opening had eclipsed that enchanted evening when she and Benny had made their first hit at the Club Bon Bon. But only florally.

Outside of B. B. Hummel and one or two professionals and hangers-on, nobody had come back to tell her how wonderful her dancing had been. None of the "real" people, as she called them.

Flo thought it strange, but it did not bother her particularly. It did not occur to her for an instant that her performance had been a disappointment. Flo was blessed with a sublime faith in herself. Still, she wondered why Lady Margaret and Rita Eliot had not come back. They were out there. Now that she stopped to think about it, she had seen Lady Margaret only once since leaving Easthampton. Doubtless Lady Margaret—and all of them—had been too disgusted by Benny's vulgarity. She sighed. Poor Benny. . . .

"It's Mr. LeGrand," whispered the maid.

"Well?" Flo smiled at him.

"I'd like to talk to you alone," he told her bluntly.

"Of course." She turned to the maid. "I won't need you any more, Anna. Good night."

The maid said, "Good night," and went out, closing the door softly.

Flo sat down. LeGrand lighted a fresh cigar and took a few steps across the room. A queer mood for him to be in, Flo thought—on the night of a successful opening. She waited. He continued to smoke in a brooding silence. After a moment Flo said:

"I thought everything went off splendidly, didn't you?"

"I don't know."

"Really?" She felt suddenly uneasy.

"We got a lot of things to talk over." He looked at her, and there was a smoldering light in his eyes. "Come to supper at my apartment. I have ordered everything."

"Oh, I—I can't."

"What do you mean, you can't?"

"Well, I've another engagement."

"Break it." He had never spoken this way to her before.

"I couldn't do that." The expression in his eyes disconcerted her.

"It's time we had an understanding, you and me." He frowned heavily. "Who's your—engagement with?"

"That fella, eh? Well, I guess you can put him off."

"But I tell you I can't."

He came toward her, and his lips curled unpleasantly. "You know what this place cost me? You know what it cost me to give you this opening tonight?"

"It's nice of you to bring that up." She was angry now.

"Yes—well, I'm telling you. It's my money. Who do you think put you over in New York? I did. I've done everything anybody could do for a woman—and I guess it's about time we talked things over. Get your wrap and come with me. My car's waiting."

"Please don't be disagreeable," she said. "I've told you——"

"Who do you think you are?" He hurled the words at her in a sudden outburst of temper. "After all I spent on you—an' you're a flop! That's what you are—a flop!"

"Oh!" Flo's lips opened incredulously. "What do you mean?"

"That's what I mean! You didn't get over tonight—everybody out there knows it. I thought you could make the grade as a star by yourself—but you failed. If you don't think so—read tomorrow's notices."

CHAPTER XXIV.

Flo sat staring at LeGrand as if he had struck her. It couldn't be true, what he was saying, she was telling herself desperately, she wasn't a flop.

"And even now," he said harshly, "you ain't ready to listen to reason. Well, I tell you—you're coming with me now—or you don't dance in this place again."

"Oh, so that's it," she said as she stood up swiftly, her eyes narrowed with fury. "That's the understanding you're talking about!"

"Everything I've done for you!" His cigar had gone cold. He flung it angrily upon the new carpet and shook a wrathy finger at her. "And what do I get from you? Nothing! You wouldn't even go through with the divorce, after I go to all the trouble to help you. The poor sap was willing—he would give you a divorce any time, but you—"

"You didn't tell me what it was that he'd have to go through!" she flashed back at him furiously. "I didn't know what it all meant. You said that your lawyer would handle everything for me. When I found out it meant dragging Benny through a dirty scandal, I wouldn't do it. No! He's never done anything to deserve it."

"Listen to me." He was standing so close to her now that she could feel his hot breath on her face. And his eyes blazed with uncontrollable rage. "I've waited a year and a half for this night—and you ain't going to fool me. Do you hear?—you ain't going to fool me!"

She stepped back. He followed her.

"You're coming with me—or by this time tomorrow night the sign with your name in electric lights will be down from in front of this night club. I'll tear it down, myself, and smash every bulb spelling your name! And that will be the last time your name goes up on Broadway. I'll ruin you!"

Benny Darrell stood there. He was very pale. Flo backed into a corner, frightened. She had seen him look this way only once before—when a stage hand had insulted her. Afterward the stage hand had been carted off to a hospital.

LeGrand was larger and heavier. With an oath, he suddenly swung his thick fist for Benny's chin.

But Benny's chin was not there. Earlier in his nomadic career, Benny had once played in an act with a middleweight champion who was making a triumphal vaudeville tour. Benny and the champion's sparring partner had become pals, and from him Benny had learned the rudiments of the manly art.

Benny danced away, the light of battle flashing in his eye; and, roaring like a bull, LeGrand closed in on him.

It was destined not to be much of a boxing match. LeGrand had the strength of a giant, impelled by an insane fury, and, as he took a stinging jab on the mouth, he caught Benny's coat lapel and swung him around, tearing the coat half off.

Benny sprawled backward over a chair, but was up in an instant, boring in on LeGrand with short, vicious punches. LeGrand, spitting blood, rushed after him, and once more sent him reeling backward. This time Benny fell heavily against a table, which overturned with a shattering of glass.

As Benny managed to struggle to his feet and rushed at LeGrand again, a waiter ran in, followed by another waiter.

"Otto!" gasped LeGrand. "Get—my gun! quick! He—attacked me! Get my gun, I tell you."

One of the waiters left the room on a run. The other quickly snatched up a light chair and made a lunge at Benny. Just then Benny connected with LeGrand's chin—a lucky blow—and LeGrand crumpled and fell to the floor.

Crash! The chair struck the wall just above Benny's head. He dodged suddenly back against the wall, groped for the light switch, found it—and darkness blotted out the room.

With a leap, Benny gained the door and sprinted down the corridor. Ahead he saw another door. He staggered through it and out into Fifty-fourth street. A great commotion rose behind him, but he ran on, bareheaded, disheveled. A cruising taxi drew up at the curb. Benny managed to wrench open the door and crawl into the tonneau.

"Anywhere," answered Benny. "Only—make it fast, please. There's a lotta squarehead waiters chasin' me—the cops'll think I run out without payin' my check!"

CHAPTER XXV.

One-thirty. Flo was looking out of a window in her luxurious suite at the Versailles, looking down upon the lights that glistened in Central Park. There were not very many lights at this hour.

She glanced at her wrist-watch. Alec should be along at any minute. He had said he would join her as soon as he could get away from his party. A laden supper table and a bottle of champagne in a silver bucket of ice were in readiness.

Her heart was still fluttering painfully from the unpleasant scene she had just gone through in her dressing-room at LeGrand's night-club. It all seemed so unreal, even now that LeGrand should have behaved like such a swine. Could it be true, she asked herself, that LeGrand had meant his threat? And then Benny—what had happened to Benny after she left?

Surely this was indeed an unfortunate moment for this romantic supper a deux. And Alexander Winston's first visit to her rooms.

She knew that he wanted to marry her. Her own sentiments toward him were somewhat confused. Perhaps she was not really in love with him. . . . And yet she was sure that he was by all odds the most eligible husband anyone could have. Ambition whispered many things in her ear. . . .

There was a gentle knock upon her door. She walked slowly across and opened it. Alexander Winston came in and, after closing the door, drew her to him impetuously.

"It isn't very nice," she pouted, as she drew back, "to kiss a lady while you've got your hat on!"

Winston flung his top-hat and overcoat on the divan. "I couldn't wait to take it off," he laughed. And he kissed her again.

Rather breathlessly Flo disengaged herself from his arms. "Supper is on that table," she said. "I ordered everything that I know you like."

"I didn't eat any of that atrocious food they serve at your club," he told her, as he seated her at the table. "We had our own liquor, fortunately. How I loathe night-clubs."

"I hope the champagne's cold enough," Flo said.

"Haven't you any Scotch?"

"No." She was disappointed. "This is very good champagne."

"I never drink it after midnight."

"I'm sorry," she said. "Do you mind giving me a glass?" Sometimes, she thought, he could be annoyingly selfish.

As they ate supper she told him about the unpleasant incident that had taken place in her dressing-room. He seemed incredulous.

"You mean to tell me that that swine LeGrand actually told you you were fired?"

"Of course, the whole thing is ridiculous," she said, trying to speak lightly. "Any one of a dozen night-clubs would gladly feature me, if I gave them the chance. I'm sure of that."

"Mm." Alexander Winston doubted this, though he did not say so. "Well, anyway, my dear, LeGrand's loss is my gain."

He was going to ask her to be his wife! She lowered her eyes demurely, and one polished finger-nail played over the jewels in the bracelet he had given her.

Winston rose and sauntered across the room to the divan and flung himself down. "Come over here by me," he said.

With a proper show of reluctance, she went over and seated herself beside him.

"Nice quarters you have here." He glanced carelessly around the apple-green and orchid room. Then he turned back to her and his eyes twinkled. "Will you please tell me why on earth you've refused to let me come up before?"

"Well—I thought—"

"You're the most puritanical puritan I've ever known!" he said sharply.

Abruptly he took her in his arms. The violence of his kiss displeased her. She freed herself from his arms and smoothed her hair.

"Please, Alex—"

"What's the matter with you, Flo?"

"I—I feel rather nervous tonight."

"Sorry." He lighted a cigarette. "I had thought this cozy little supper was to be—" He did not finish the sentence.

"Was to be—what, Alec?"

"Look here," he said, "now that your dancing is finished—for the moment, at least—there's nothing to keep you in New York, is there?"

"Why—I don't suppose so," she answered uncertainly, wondering what he would say next.

"Then what do you say we throw our trunks aboard a paquebot and sail for one of the more secluded spots, famed in song and story?"

"The Riviera's very nice." Her eyes were still lowered, and her tone was uncertain. "And the Orient."

"Somewhere east of Suez, where there are no nosey neighbors and a man can raise a thirst. Or a beard, if necessary." He smiled at her lazily through the smoke of his cigarette. "There are dozens of romantic, lovely places. What do you say?"

She felt strangely calm now. For weeks she had been anticipating this moment, yet now that it had actually come, she could feel no particular thrill at the prospect of becoming Mrs. Alexander Winston.

"It sounds—very nice," she said, in rather a dull voice.

"Good!" he exclaimed, clasping her hand. "I always had an idea that you weren't such a prude as you pretended to be. How soon can you get yourself ready? There's a boat sailing Tuesday."

"Oh, but the divorce! It would take at least six months to get it in Reno. Or did you mean," she asked, "that I should get it in Paris?"

Alexander Winston looked at her in amazement.

"I hadn't thought of it at all. You can get a divorce any time."

"Why, certainly." Then she smiled. He was only teasing.

"But who said anything about that?" asked Winston.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Alexander Winston's blank stare when she mentioned the subject of marriage gave Flo an unpleasant feeling. She stared back at him.

"But who said anything about getting married?" he repeated finally.

"Well, didn't you?"

"Good Heavens, no!" He grinned wryly at her. "Why in the world should anyone want to get into such a hopeless entanglement as marriage? It's so darned inconvenient to get out of. Look at yourself, now. You've got to go to all the bother of getting a divorce, and——"

"Alec!" She was quite pale. "You weren't thinking of suggesting that I—that we—would go abroad together without being married?"

"And why not?" he demanded. "After all, my dear, we're both civilized persons, aren't we?"

"I'm afraid I'm not that civilized." She stood up, and her eyes were very angry.

"Oh, come now." He reached for her hand, but she snatched it away.

"I don't know what I've ever done to lead you to think that you could say that sort of thing to me!"

"Are we living in 1928—or are we living in the days of good Queen Victoria? You certainly must know your way around—you're no schoolgirl!"

Her eyes were flashing angrily. "Please don't say any more. I wish you'd go now."

"For heaven's sake," he said hotly, "don't behave as if you were a peasant."

Peasant! The word cut her like a whiplash. That was exactly what she had called Benny! She began to cry, miserably, helplessly.

Swiftly Flo unclasped the diamond-and-sapphire bracelet he had given her and dropped it on the table. With a shrug, Winston dropped it into his pocket.

"Please go." She lifted her head with a gesture that in a motion-picture would have indicated regal disdain. "I never wish to see you again."

"I shall see that you get your wish," murmured Winston. And departed without another word.

Flo dropped into a chair. Suddenly she thought of Benny. She wondered what he was doing.

Foreman & Clark make the clothes they sell. Five giant sunlit factories supply their Coast to Coast Stores. All woolens are tested for strength, wear, sun and moisture resistance. The same instruments, the same tests as The Bureau of Standards.

All Woolens are London Shrunk. Linings are the finest Silk or Alpaca, by actual test. All garments are sewn with pure silk. 36 hand operations in each garment mould in the shape. Silver Hymo and the finest Belgian linen keep the shape perfect. Collars and shoulders hand-worked and hand-set. Sleeves are hand-draped. Coat edges are hand-taped with pre-shrunk linen. Buttonholes are hand-sewn.
